تعارف

سرسید کا رسالہ اسباب بعادت ہند مسلمانانِ پاکستان و ہند کی جدوجمد آزادی کی تاریخ بیں ایک سک میل کی حیثیت رکھتا ہے اس لئے یہ مناسب سمجھاگیا کہ برصغیری برطانوی تبلط ہیں ایک سک میل کی چپاسویں سالگرہ کے موقعہ پر حال ہی میں دریافت کئے گئے اسباب بعادت بند پر سرسید کے تین غیرمطبوعہ مضامین کو پہلی مرتبہ قار تین کی خدمت میں چیش کیا جائے۔

الن میں سب سے پہلے سرسید کا ایک اگریزی مضمون ان میں سب سے پہلے سرسید کا ایک اگریزی مضمون کے انہوں نے اللہ وکثوریہ کو نومبر ۱۹۸۹ء کو جاری کردہ اشتمار کے فور آبعد سیرٹری آف سٹیٹ فار انڈیا کو بھیجا ملکہ وکثوریہ کو نومبر ۱۹۸۹ء کو جاری کردہ اشتمار کے فور آبعد سیرٹری آف سٹیٹ فار انڈیا کو بھیجا کہ اس کا متعمد بغادت کے بنیادی اسباب پر روشنی ڈالنا اور اپنے بیان کردہ مؤتف کی تائید میں کہ اس کا متعمد بغادت کی بنیادی اسباب پر روشنی ڈالنا اور اپنے بیان کردہ مؤتف کی تائید میں دلائل چیش کرنا ہے۔ اس کے ساتھ سرسید نے حکومت ہند کے ان تمام اقدامات کو برابا ہے جو اس نے اس بغادت کی تمام وجو ہات کو پوری طرح دور کرنے کے لئے اشائے تھے۔

مرسید نے اس مضمون کو سیکرٹری آف سٹیٹ کو بھیجنے کی وجوہات کا ذکر کرتے ہوئے کہ میں بات صبح ہے کہ اسباب بغادت ہند کا تجربہ کی اہل علم اور تجربہ کا رادوگوں نے کیا گھما ہے کہ یہ بات صبح ہے کہ اسباب بغادت ہند کا تجربہ کی اہل علم اور تجربہ کا ارادوگوں نے کیا گھما ہے کہ یہ بات صبح ہے کہ اسباب بغادت ہند کا تجربہ کی اہل علم اور تجربہ کا رادوگوں نے کیا

ہے لیکن چونکہ اس مضمون پر ابھی تک کسی ہندوستانی نے قلم نمیں اٹھایا۔ اس لئے ہوسکتا ہے

کہ ان کا پیش کردہ سے مضمون اہل ہند کے خیالات کو سیجھنے میں مدد دے سکے۔ لیکن نہ کورہ بالا سطور لکھتے دفت سرسید کو اس بات کا علم نہ تھا کہ ان کے پیش کردہ اس مضمون سے پہلے حکومت ہند کئی ایک ہندو افسروں اور منشیوں سے اس موضوع پر لکھنے کی درخواست کرچکی متحی۔

ان میں سے جن لوگوں کے تحریری بیانات اب اعدیا آفس لا بسریری میں موجود ہیں ان میں منتی جیون تعل، منتی کیدار ناتھ اور منتی موہن لعل کے نام قابل ذکر ہیں ان کے علاوہ ایک اور تفصیلی مضمون

The thoughts of a native of Northern India on the Rebellion its causes and remedies

ہے جو لندن ۱۸۵۸ میں شائع ہوا تھا اس پر مصنف کا نام درج نہیں لیکن اندراجات سے صاف ظاہر کہ یہ کسی مندو اہل قلم اور دانشور کی تحریر ہے ایک دوسرا تفصیلی مضمون Causes and progress of the Munity جو منشی موہن لعل نے اا نومبر ۱۸۵۷ء کو برگیڈیئر چیمبرلین کو پیش کیا تھا۔

ان سب کا بنیادی مقصد ہندوستان کی ہندو رعیت کو انگریزی حکومت کا وفادار ثابت کرنا ان کو بغاوت کے الزام سے بری الذمہ قرار دیتا اور انگریزی حکومت کی ہندو راجاؤں اور حکمرانوں کے ساتھ کی گئی ناانصافیوں کی یاد دھائی کرانا تھا۔

مثلًا "ایک اگریز افسرنے جب ایک پڑھے لکھے ہندو سے بغاوت کے اسباب کے متعلق سوال کیاتو اس کا جواب تھا: نانا صاحب کے ساتھ بے حد غیر منصفانہ سلوک، کور سکھ کے ساتھ ناانصانی کا بر آؤ، جھانی کی رانی کو دی گئیں اذبیتی، اودھ کی سلطنت پر تبضہ، کروی کے راؤ صاحب کے ساتھ فراڈ اور اس فتم کی گئی دو سری زیادتیاں جو صوبہ جات متحدہ کی حکومت نے اس علاقہ کے بے شار زمینداروں کے ساتھ کیں۔

(Kaye and Malleson, History of the Indian Mutiny, London. 1889 p.282.)

مسلمانوں میں سے البتہ مرف ایک سرسید ہی تھے۔ جنہوں نے اس موضوع پر مسلمانوں کے نقطۂ نظر کی ترجمانی کے ساتھ ساتھ ایک ہندوستانی کی حیثیت سے اپنا موقف پیش کیا ہے۔

اس کتاب میں دو سرا مضمون "اسباب بعنادت ہند" ہے اس میں اس رسالہ کے عام طور پر دستیاب ایڈیشن میں دیئے گئے اردو متن کے علاوہ سرسید کا اگریزی پیش لفظ، کتاب کے اندراجات کی تفصیلی فہرست، ہر پیراگراف کا اگریزی خلاصہ اور پادری اڈمنڈ کے اس خط کا اگریزی متن جو اس نے عیسائیت کی ترغیب کے لئے ہندوستان کے پڑھے لکھے عوام کو مخاطب کرکے لکھا تھا شامل ہیں۔

سرسیدنے اس رسالہ کا نام "اسباب سرکشی ہندوستان کا جواب مضمون" اور اگریزی
مرسیدنے اس رسالہ کا نام "اسباب سرکشی ہندوستان کا جواب مضمون" اور اگریزی

مالی نے اس رسالے کا تعارف کراتے ہوئے لکھا ہے:

یہ رسالہ صرف ایک دفعہ سرسید نے ۱۸۵۸ء پس چھپوایا اور چند نسخوں کے سوااس کی ام جلدیں انگلتان بیل پارلیمنٹ کے ممبروں کے پاس بھیج دی تھیں اس لئے ہندوستان میں کی اشاعت نہیں ہوئی چونکہ اس رسالہ کا لکھنا جیسا کہ سرسید کی لا نف میں مفصل بیان کیا گیا ان کی سرکاری کمکی اور قوی خدمات میں سے ایک عمرہ ترین خدمت تھی اس نظر سے لیا ان کی سرکاری کمکی اور قوی خدمات میں سے ایک عمرہ ترین خدمت تھی اس نظر سے تلمب معلوم ہوا کہ یہ رسالہ تمام و کمال سرسید کالا نف کے آخر میں بطور ضمیمہ کے چھاب ریا

طل نے ایک اور جگہ اس کے لکھے جانے اور چھپنے کا تفصیلی طور پر ذکر کیا ہے البتہ مل پر اس کے چھپنے کی تاریخ ۱۸۵۹ء دی ہے۔

یہ رسالہ عالیا انہوں نے مراد آباد میں چینے ہی لکمنا شروع ار دیا تھا۔ اس کے ختم

ہونے کے بعد بغیراس کے کہ اس کا اگریزی ترجمہ کرا کیں۔ اردد ہی ہیں اس کو مطبع مفعلیٹ گزت آگرہ میں چھپنے کو بھیج دیا اور ۱۸۵۹ء میں اس کی پارٹی سوجلدیں چھپ کران کے پاس پہنے کا ارادہ کیا تو ان کی دوست مانع آئے اور ماسٹر رام چندر کے چھوٹے بھائی رائے شمل داس جو اس وقت مراد آباد دوست مانع آئے اور ماسٹر رام چندر کے چھوٹے بھائی رائے شمل داس جو اس وقت مراد آباد میں مصنف اور سرسید کے نمایت دوست تھے، انہوں نے کما کہ ان تمام کمایوں کو جلا دو اور ہرگز اپنی جان کو معرض خطر میں نہ والو۔ سرسید نے کما دمیں ان باتوں کو گور نمنٹ پر ظاہر کرنا ملک اور قوم اور خود گور نمنٹ کی خیر خوابی سجمتا ہوں، پس آگر ایک ایسے کام پر جو سلطنت اور رعایا دونوں کے لئے مفید ہو جھے کو گوئی ہی چھانے تو گوارا ہے" رائے شمل داس نے جب سرسید کی آمادگی ہر رجہ غایت دیکھی اور ان کے سمجھانے کاکوئی اثر نہ ہوا تو وہ آبریدہ ہو کر خاص خاموش ہو رہے۔ سرسید کی آمادگی ہو رہنٹ اول دو رکھتی بلور نفل کے ادا کیس اور دعا ماگی اور اس وقت خاموش ہو رہے۔ سرسید نے اول دو رکھتی بلور نفل کے ادا کیس اور دعا ماگی اور اس وقت کی کری جو جلدیں ایک پارسل ولایت کو دوانہ کیا اور ایک جلد گور نمنٹ اعدیا میں بھیج کے کم پارٹج سو جلدوں کا ایک پارسل ولایت کو دوانہ کیا اور ایک جلد گور نمنٹ اعدیا میں بھیج دی اور کی ور بھیں اپنے پاس رکھ لیں۔

گور نمنٹ انڈیا میں جب یہ کتاب مینی اور اگریزی میں ترجمہ ہو کر کونسل میں فیش ہوئی تو لارڈ کینگ گور نر جزل اور سرارٹر فریر نے جو کونسل میں ممبر نے اس کے مضمون کو محض خیرخواہی پر محمول کیا۔ گر مسٹر میسل بیٹن نے جو اس وقت فارن سیکرٹری سے اس کے خلاف بست بری اسپیج دئی اور یہ رائے مُلا ہرکی کہ "اس شخص نے نمایت باغیانہ مضمون لکھا کے اور اس سے حسب ضابطہ باز پرس ہوئی چاہئے اور جواب لینا چاہئے اور اگر کوئی معقول جواب نہ دے سکے تو سخت سزا دیئی چاہئے۔" لیکن چو تکہ اور کوئی ممبران کا ہم رائے نہ تھا اس جواب نہ دے سکے تو سخت سزا دیئی چاہئے۔" لیکن چو تکہ اور کوئی ممبران کا ہم رائے نہ تھا اس کے ان کی سینج سے کوئی معنز متیجہ پیدا نہیں ہوا۔

مر ۱۸۵۹ میں جب کے لارڈ کینگ نے فرخ ایاد میں دربار کیا اور سرسید بھی اس دربار میں بلائے گئے تو وہاں ایک موقع پر مسٹرسسل بیٹن فارن سیرٹری گور نمنث انڈیا سے نمہ بھیڑ ہوسی جب ان کو معلوم ہوا کہ سید احمد خان وہی مخص ہے جس نے اسباب بعناوت پر وہ مضمون الکھا ہے تو سربید سے دو سرے دوز معیدہ ٹل کرائی نمایت رنجش ظاہر کی اور بہت دیر تک تلخ اکتگو ہوتی رہی۔ انہوں ہے کہا کہ "اگر تم گور نمنٹ کی فیر نوابی کے لئے مضمون لکھتے تو ہر گز اس کو چیوا کر ملک میں شائع نہ کرتے بلکہ صرف گور نمنٹ پر اپنے یا رعایا کے خیالات ظاہر کرتے" سربید نے کہا"میں نے اس کتاب کی کل پانچ سو جلدیں چیوائی تھیں جن میں سے چند جلدیں میرے پاس موجود ہیں اور ایک گور نمنٹ میں ہمیجیں ہے اور پکھ کم پانچ سو جلدیں ولایت روانہ کی ہیں جن کی رسید میرے پاس موجود ہے۔ میں جانا تھا کہ آج کل بسبب غیظ و فضب کے حاکموں کی رائے صائب نمیں رہی اور اس لئے وہ سید ھی باتوں کو بھی الٹی سیجھتے ہیں اس لئے جس طرح میں نے ان کو ہندوستان میں شائع نمیں کیا ای طرح اگریزوں کو بھی نمیں دکھایا صرف ایک کتاب گور نمنٹ میں ہمیجی ہے آگر اس کے سوا ایک جلد بھی کمیں ہندوستان میں مل جائے تو میں فی جلد ایک بڑار روپیہ دوں گا۔ مسٹر بیٹن کو اس بات کا بھین نہ آیا اور انہوں نے کئی بار سرسید سے پوچھا کہ کیا فی الواقع اس کا کوئی نخہ ہندوستان میں شائع نمیں ہوا۔ جب ان کو اطمینان ہوگیا پھر انہوں نے اس کا پچھ ذکر نمیں کیا اور اس کے بعد بھے سرسید کے دوست اور حامی و مددگار رہے۔

اسباب بعناوت ہند کا انگریزی ترجمہ سرآ کلینڈ کالون اور انگریزی میں سرسید کے سوائح نگار تی ایف گراہم نے ۱۸۷۳ء میں شائع کیا تھا۔ اس کی افادےت کے چیش نظر اس ترجمہ کو بھی اس کتاب میں شامل کردیا ممیائے۔

اس کتب بی سرسد کا اس موضوع پر انگریزی زبان بی جو تیرا مضمون شامل ہے دو ایک خط کی صورت بی ہے جو انہوں نے انگلتان بی ایخ قیام کے دوران ۱۱ د سمبر ۱۸ ماء کو اپنی قیام گاہ ۲۱ میکلیرک سکاڑ لندن سے اعثرا آفس کے پریشیکل اور سیرٹ ڈیپار لمنٹ کے سیرٹری سر جان کے کو لکھا۔ تھا۔ سرسید اپنے دونوں بیٹوں، یعنی سید محمود اور سد ملد کے ساتھ مئی ۱۸۲۹ء سے اکتوبر ۱۸۷۰ء تک لندن میں رہے اور اس دوران آپ کی مرجہ اعثرا سخر، تشریف لائے جمال آپ کی طاقات جان کے سے ہوئی۔

مرسید اینے ایک خطیس جو ولایت سے مولوی سید مهدی علی خان کو بھیجا تھا اس کا ذکر کرتے ہوئے لکھاہے:

میں انڈیا آفس میں صاحب سیرٹری وزیر ہند کے پاس گیا تھا انہوں نے جھے کو کونسل کے کاغذات میں میری کتب اسباب بعاوت مع کمال ترجمہ کے دکھلائی اے دکھے کر میرا دل بست خوش ہوا جو پچھ رائیں اس کی بدولت قرار پائیں ان کابیان بے فائدہ ہے۔ اہل ہند ناقدر دائن دوست کش اور اپنے خرخواہ کے دشمن ہیں گرمیں خوش ہوں کہ میرے ہم وطنوں کی بعدلئی ہوئی۔

عالی نے اس ملاقات کی تضیالت کا ذکر کرتے: ہوئے مرسید کا مندرجہ ذیل بیان بھی افغال کی مندرجہ ذیل بیان بھی افغال کیا ہے:

حولایت میں سرجان کے فارن سیرٹری وذیر بند سے پرا کیویٹ ملاقات ہوئی تو ان کی میر پر ایک وفتر کاغذات کا موجود تھا۔ انہوں نے بنیں کر کما تم جانے ہو یہ کیا چیز ہے؟ یہ تہمارا رسالہ اسباب بعاوت اصل اور اس کا اگریزی ترجمہ ہے اور اس کے ساتھ وہ تمام مباشات ہیں جو اس پر پارلینٹ میں ہوئے گرچونکہ وہ تمام مباحث کانفیڈ انشل سے اس لئے وہ نہ چھیے اور نہ ان کا ولایت کے کی اخبار میں تذکرہ ہوا۔

سرسید نے اپ ندکورہ بالا بیان میں انڈیا آفس میں اسبب بخاوتِ ہند کے جس احجریزی ترہے اور اس موضوع پر پارلیمنٹ کے مباطات کا ذکر کیا ہے وہ اب جان۔ کے کے کاغذات میں موجود نمیں۔ البند ای موضوع پر سرسید کا انگریزی زبان میں ہاتھ کا لکھا ہوا ایک خط موجود ہے جس میں انہوں نے جان۔ کے اس سوال کہ آیا بخاوت کو ایک فرتی بخاوت کا نام دیا جا سکتا ہے۔ جواب دیا ہے اس خط کا متن اس سے قبل انڈیا آفس لا بریری کے نیوز لیٹر کے خلاوہ ایک دد اور جگہ شائع ہوا تھا یہاں پر اے اس کے لیس منظر اور خط کے عکس کے ساتھ بیش کیا جا رہا ہے۔

میں لکھنے میں مصروف تھے اور اس سلسلہ میں سرسید کے رسالہ اسباب بغاوتِ ہند سے استفادہ کرنے کے ساتھ ساتھ بغاوت کے کئی ایک پہلوؤں کو سمجھنے کے لئے سرسید سے مشورہ کرتے رہتے تھے اس سلسلہ کا ایک اور خط جس میں سرسید نے جان کے کے خاندان مغلیہ میں رسم جانشینی کی تفصیلات کے متعلق استفتار کا جواب دیا تھا ان کی متذکرہ بالا کتاب کی دو سری جلد (صفحات ۲۲۴) میں درج ہے۔

بجھے امید ہے کہ سرسید کے یہ تینوں مضامین اسباب بغاوت کے متعلق سرسید کے نظریات اور جدوجہد آزادی کی ناکامی کے بعد کے پر آشوب دور میں انگریزی حکومت کے ساتھ مسلمانوں کے تعلقات استوار کرنے میں انہوں نے جو کردار اداکیا تھا اس کو سمجھنے میں مددگار ثابت ہوں گے۔

آخر میں میں اپی رفیقہ حیات مریم اور بیٹے یوسف کا شکر گزار ہوں کہ انہوں نے انگریزی عبارت کی تدوین اور ٹائپ میں میری مدد فرمائی۔

CAUSES OF THE INDIAN REVOLT;

PREFACE

The events of the year 1857 A.D., unparalleled in history, at least in the history of this country, have occupied the attention of many, who either from inclination or from their connection with the management of this country, have set themselves to search for the true causes of the startling occurrences which have transpired, and each one has put forward his views in conformity with the amount of information or capacity of which he was possessed.

The Government, after a careful investigation into all the circumstances, which have occurred since the disaffection of the Sepoys was first made apparent at Barrack-poor, has shown by the terms of the Royal Proclamation, that it has ascertained the true state of the case, but at the same time there are many minor matters which in all probability have not come to the notice of Government, and as it is the duty of all to bring forward such information as they may possess; and as natives of this country are probably best acquainted with the causes of the rebellion, I have deemed it incumbent upon me, more especially as I have been honored and rewarded by Government for my poor services during this unhappy time, to record for the information of the authorities in this country and in England, my opinion in reference to this eventful crisis.

> Syud Ahmed Khan, Principal Sudder Ameen, Moradabad.

INDEX TO CONTENTS

- 1. Definition of "Rebellion" exemplified with instances.
- 2. Why it is resorted to?
- The Rebellion of 1857 did not originate from a single cause but from complication of causes.
- The distribution of "Chuppatties" had not league for its object.
- Russia and Persia not chargeable with a league in this matter.
- The subject of the Proclamation which was found in the tent of a Persian Prince discussed.
- The Despatch of a Firman by the Ex-King of Delhie to the King of Persia not improbable, but not the origin of rebellion.
- The annexation of Oude not the cause of the general rise.
- The league not formed with the view of overthrowing the Government of strangers.
- 10. The position of the Ex-King of Delhie well known within the town and its environs, but over-rated in the distant Provinces.
- 11. The declaration of Lord Amherst in the year 1827-to the effect that the sovereignty of India belonged to the British Government, and that it no longer existed in the Timour family, did not offend any one.
- 12. The Mahomedans did not contemplate Jehad against the Christians prior to the outbreak.
- 13. The preaching of Jehad in India 35 years before, with this reservation—that its practice against the British Government was opposed to the doctrines of the Mahomedan religion, and from the same cause its practice on the other side of the Indus provinces, i.e., against the Seiks, was held lawful.
- None of the acts committed by the Mahomedan Rebels during the disturbances were in accordance with the tenets of the Mahomedan religion. The futwa of Jehad printed at Delhie was a counterfeit one—a large number of the Moulvees who considered the King of Delhi a violater of the law, left off praying in the Royal Mosque.

15. The same persons whose seals are said to be affixed to the Futwa, at Delhie protected the lives and honor of the Christians.

The Bengal army were not previously in league for an

17. Nor was there any league between the army and the Ex-King, though it is not improbable some Sepoy or Non-Commissioned Officer may have been his disciple

18. The non-admission of a native as a Member into the Legislative Council was the original cause of the outbreak.

19. The importance of such an admission discussed.

20. The inadmission of such a Member proved a hinderance to the development of the good feelings of the India subject towards the Government, and of their good intention towards them; on the contrary, contrary effects were produced.

21. The outbreak of the Rebellion proceeded from the following five causes:

Misunderstanding on the part of the Indians.

Apprehensions of interference of Government with the religions and customs of the Indians.

Mentions of the Secundra Orphan system.

 Religious discussions being carried to a great height during the present time.

4. The Covenanted Officers assumed the Missionary functions. Preaching of the Gospel by the Missionaries.

5. The establishment of Missionary Schools and the Covenanted Officers attending examination at them.

Village Schools.

7. The introduction of female education.

8. Alterations in the usual system of education in large Colleges.

9. The issue of Government Proclamation, on the subject of admitting Government College English students to appointments in preference to other candidates.

- 10. Introduction of the messing system in the Jails.
- 11. The circulation of Mr. Edmond's letters from Calcutta.
- 12. The Interference in religious matters more repugnant to the feelings of the Mahomedans and its causes.
- The promulgation of objectionable Law and procedures.
 - Act XXI. of 1850.
 - 2. Act XV. of 1856. Giving liberty to females.
 - The promulgation of certain Acts in case wherein the parties are of one religion.
 - 4. The resumption of maafees.
 - The speeches of Lord Munro and the Duke of Wellington on the subject.
 - The public sales of Zemindaree rights.
 - Heavy assessment of lands.
 - The abolition of Talookdaree rights, particularly in the Oude Provinces.
 - 9. The introduction of the stamp paper. The system of Civil administration in the Bengal Provinces superior to that in the Punjab, but requires revision in certain points.
- III Ignorance of Government of the state of the country and their subjects.
 - Local authorities generally unacquainted with the condition of their subjects.
 - Overwhelming poverty of the Indians, particularly of the Mahomedans.
 - 3. Scarcity of employment generally of the Mahomedans, whose profession is commonly service, were particularly impoverished. The same cause induced them to serve the rebels on one anna and one and half anna or 1 seer of flour per diem.
 - 4 The stoppage of Charitable pensions and stipends tending in a great measure to the poverty of the Indians.
 - 5 The investment of capital in Government loans

6. Poverty the cause of the subjects rejoicing at the idea of a change of Government and wishing for it.

Neglect in matters which should have received consideration of Government.

IV.

 Want of cordiality towards the Indians. In ancient times as long as this was not observed by the reigning powers, tranquility was not established.

Treating the Indians with contempt.

- 3. The ill temper and uncourtly address of local authorities towards the natives.
- 4. The ill-treatment more repugnant to the feelings of the Mahomedans, and their causes.
- Exclusion of natives from promotion to high appointments. Lord Bentinck's system of employing natives in high grades of service an inadequate one.

6. The not holding of Durbars by the Governor General of India, and not conferring on Indians the rank and honors due to merit according to the usage of former Emperors.

7. The observation of these rules by Lord Auckland and Lord Ellenborough, a very proper one.

8. The facts of the rebellion in India appeared more serious to the authorities than they reality were, their causes:

9. The promulgation of H.M.'s Proclamation highly commendable, indeed may be said to have originated under divine inspiration.

The insubordinate state of the Indian forces.

1. The paucity of English forces.

2. The employment of Hindoos and Mahomedans in the same Regiment.

3. If these two castes formed distinct Regiments, perhaps the Mahomedans would not have objected to use of the new cartridge.

4. The pride of the Indian forces and its causes.

- 5. The league of the Indian army against the use of the new cartridges, formed after January 1857.
- 6. The impropriety of punishing the Non-commissioned officers at Meerut, which touched the vanity of the Indian forces.
- Want of confidence in the Indian forces towards Government after the occurrences at Meerut.
- 8. Why the mutiny did not break out in the Punjab, and its causes.

TO THE EDUCATED NATIVES OF INDIA

The time appears to have come when earnest consideration should be given to the subject, whether or not all men should embrace the same system of Religion. Railways, Steam Vessels and the Electric Telegraph, are rapidly uniting all the nations of the earth: the more they are brought together, the more certain does the conclusion become, that all have the same wants, the same anxieties, the same hopes, the same fears, and therefore, the same nature and the same origin. It is also very certain that death universally closes the scene.

Is there, then, no means by which the sorrows and anxieties of life can be alleviated, and by which comfort can be given to all men in the hour of death? Is it rational to suppose that each nation is to find out a way for itself, by mere guess? or has the one God, who made all, appointed different methods of obtaining present and future happiness to different portions of His family? — Surely, this cannot be.

Now CHRISTIANITY is a system which professes to have come by direct revelation from God Himself, as the only system by which happiness can be secured in this world, or in that other world which it reveals. It has this peculiarity to distinguish it from every other system of religion in the world, that it appeals to the reason as well as to the heart of man, and it is the only system in the world, which has spread by the mere force of argument. The nations which believe in it are the most thoughtful and the most civilised in the earth, so that it has, at all events, a claim to be heard on it's own behalf.

Having received the greatest blessings from it ourselves, we are anxious that others also should be induced to receive them, and therefore, this solemn and earnest appeal is made to you to examine this important subject for yourself. The arguments in its favour are very numerous; this paper will dwell only upon one of them, but that one will be quite sufficient to establish the point.

A man called Jesus was born in a place called Bethleham, in the land of Judea, about 1859 years ago. He was a man of low birth, and in poor circumstances, but he professed to be a teacher sent by God to point out the only way which would lead unto God. After going about the country for three years preaching, he was put to death by the Roman Government at the solicitation of the Jewish Priests. So far all is admitted universally: the death of Jesus is a fact, as the death of Julius Caesar is a fact, and no person thinks of doubting the one fact more than the other. The Jews, the greatest enemies of Jesus and his doctrine, glory in it, and they are the best witnesses we could desire.

This is the one great fact upon which the whole system of Christianity depends; if it is true, the Gospel is true—for no person could rise from the dead except by the power of God, and God would not raise from the dead any person whose life and doctrine was not pleasing unto Him; if it is talse, the Gospel is false.

We would respectfully and earnestly urge you to direct your whole attention to this one point. Did Jesus rise from the dead, or did he not? We must bring witnesses of the tact, here they are; Peter, James, John, Matthew, Mathias, Thomas, Jude, Mary Magdalen, Cleophas and 500 others, whose names are not now known. Many of these persons were the chosen friends, who had been constantly with Jesus for three years before his death; they could not therefore have been mistaken as to his person: they came forward within 50 days of his death and declared that he had usen again, in the very place where, and among the very people by whom, he had been crucified; they had nothing to gain by this declaration, but every thing to lose, not improbably their own lives, and yet they persuaded come thousands of persons that what they said was true so much so that the name of this despised and hated man was now, by those who had rejected Him, worshipped and revered; they continued telling the same fact as long as they lived, not only in Judea, but over all the Roman Empire: many of them showed their sincerity by allowing themselves to be put to torture and death for saying so, when they might have escaped, had they only said it was false: though ignorant and unlettered men, they persuaded thousands, all over the Empire, to believe them, to forsake their own religion, and to embrace the one they taught, notwithstanding scorn and death: they held out no promises of earthly comfort and honor to induce men to believe them, but rather the contrary: they were not satisfied with a formal adhesion to their views; but they required self-denial and holiness of life, which all men naturally dislike; they said that even the new religion would not save any man; had yet though they thus gained nothing themselves, and told others that they must not expect to gain anything either, they satisfied men that Jesus did rise again! and this so effectually, that from the most obscure corner of the Roman Empire, the doctrine preached by uneducated fishermen, about a poor carpenter's son, spread over the whole Empire even after their death, and overthrew every other system of religion though sanctioned by the consent of ages!

We have likewise the evidence of persons who did not become preachers of the New Doctrine, to prove the fact of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ; the soldiers who where placed as a guard at the grave saw it, and told the priests of it, and they found it necessary to invent an absurd story to account for the admitted disappearance of the body!

The only evidence which any person could desire, which we do not possess, is that of the public: it may be said why did He not show Himself publicly to all, especially to those persons who put Him to death? Various reasons may be assigned for this, derived from the nature of the doctrine which He taught; into these it is impossible at present to enter: but it must be observed, that the want of this evidence in no way affects the truth of that which we do possess: if a number of persons who knew Him intimately, said Him and spoke to Him, and ate with Him upon several occasions, it certainly does not tend to shake their evidence to ask, why did not others see Him also? Whenever He appeared, all who were present at that place at that time saw Him, upon one occasion to the number of 500! So that it was not an apparition, but a reality. One person, by name Thomas, said that he would not believe that it was really his old friend, till he had put his hand into the holes caused by the nails in His hands, and into that caused by the spear in His side: but even he was satisfied!

We earnestly entreat you to consider these facts; if there is any flaw in the evidence, point it out; but if not, then admit that it is true, that Jesus Christ did rise from the dead,— and embrace the Gospel.

This resurrection of Jesus Christ is an assurance unto all men, that God hath appointed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness: you will then stand before Him; you will be called upon to answer for the evil thoughts, the evil words, and the evil actions of which you have been guilty. Are you prepared to do so? There is no man living who is. But all guilt is pardoned in the case of every one who trusts in Jesus Christ as His Saviour, for holiness is conferred upon him likewise, so that he will be prepared even for that dreadful day.

We urge you, therefore, as you value your own happiness for ever, to examine this great subject, and to ask God himself to enable you, by His Holy Spirit's teaching, to do so aright. Think over it and examine it in private; do so with others also to whom, as well as to yourself, this letter is addressed; contine your attention to the one point, whether or not those persons are to be believed who said they saw Jesus Christ after He had risen from the dead: if you do so, you will be convinced by all the rules of evidence, that Jesus Christ did rise from the dead, and that therefore the Gospel is a true and the only Revelation from God.

Then, be courageous and embrace it publicly: for He said Himself "whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed when He cometh in the Glory of His Father with the Holy Angels." We long to see churches thronged with the natives of this land, in which the glad trdings of the Gospel shall regularly be proclaimed by your own countrymen, and not by strangers only; in which women, as well as men, shall be urged to repent of their sins, and to prepare to meet their God; in which children shall be taught lessons of morality and truth, to guide their conduct in this world, and lessons of holiness and peace to tit them for the next, and in which death shall be spoken of as an enemy no longer to be feared, for his sting has been taken away by "Our Saviour Jesus Christ who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel." That this will yet be the case we are assured by God himself: we long for the time when it shall be fully realized. Why not in this generation? Would it not be an infinite improvement upon the foolish, degrading and wicked idolatry, which now defiles the land? "We speak as to wise men, judge ye what we say."

Any answers that may be sent to this letter, will be received and acknowledged, D.V., if addressed to the care of E. Edmond, Esq., Calcutta, prepaid ر من کا ہونا یا نج اصول پر منی ہے The outbreak of Rebellion proceeded from the following five causes.

یہ نقص جو ہمارے گورنمنٹ میں تھا اس نے تمام ہندوستان کے حالات میں سرایت کی اور جس قدر اسباب سرکشی کے جمع ہو گئے گو وہ ای ایک امریر متفرع میں گرغور کرکے سب ا کواحاطہ میں لایا جائے تو پانچ اصول پر مبنی ہوتے ہیں۔

اول: غلط فني رعايا يعني برعكس مجمنا تجاويز كور نمنث كا-

دوم: جاری ہونا ایسے آئین اور ضوابط اور طریقه حکومت کا جو ہندوستان کی حکومت اور ہندوستانوں کی علوات کے مناسب نہ تھے یا معنرت رسانی کرتے تھے۔

سوم: تاواتف رہا گور نمنٹ کا رعایا کی اصلی عالات اور اطوار اور علیا ملک عالات اور اطوار اور علوات اور ان مصائب سے جو ان بر گزرتی تھیں اور جن سے رعایا کاول گور نمنٹ سے بعثا جاتا تھا۔

جہارم: ترک ہونا ان امور کا ہمارے گور نمنٹ کی طرف ہے جن کا بجا لانا ہمارے گور نمنٹ کی طرف ہے جن کا بجا لانا ہمارے گور نمنٹ پر ہندوستان کی حکومت کے لئے واجب اور لازم تھا۔

بنجم: بدانظای اور ب اہتمای فوج کی۔

اب ہم ان پانچوں اصل کی تنعیل اور اس کی ہر ہر شاخ کو جدا جدا بیان کرتے ہیں۔ وہاللہ التوفیق!

ایے وقت میں کہ جب نوج کا یہ حال تھا اور ان کے سر خور و کیر سے بھرے ہوئے تھے اور دل میں یہ جانے تھے کہ جس بات پر ہم اڑیں گے اور کرار کریں گے خواہ مخواہ سرکار کو مانا پڑے گا۔ ان کو بئے کار توس ذیئے گئے جس میں وہ یقین سمجھتے کہ چربی کا میل ہے اور اس کے استعال سے ہمارا دھرم جا تا رہے گا۔ انہوں نے اس کے کاشنے سے انکار کیا جب بارک پور کی بلٹن اس جرم میں موقوف ہوگئی اور تھم سایا گیا تو تمام فوج نمایت رنجیدہ ہوئی کیونکہ وہ یوں سمجھتے تھے کہ بسبب تعلل نہ بب مارک پور کے بارک پور کی بلٹن کا بچھ قصور نہ تھا۔ وہ محض بے قصور اور صرف سرکار کی باانعانی سے موقوف ہوئی ہے۔ تمام فوج نمایت رنجیدہ تھی کہ ہم نے سرکار کی باانعانی سے موقوف ہوئی ہے۔ تمام فوج نمایت رنجیدہ تھی کہ ہم نے سرکار کی باانعانی سے موقوف ہوئی ہے۔ تمام فوج نمایت رنجیدہ تھی کہ ہم نے سرکار کے ساتھ رفاقتیں کیں۔ اپنے سرکار کو ملک در ملک فتح کردیئے اور سرکار ہمارے نہ ہب

جال جال فوج میں بیہ خبر پہنچی تمام فوج زیادہ تر رنجیدہ ہوئی میرٹھ کی فوج سے جو حرکت ہوئی تھی، اس سے تمام ہندوستانی فوج نے لیتین جان لیا تھا کہ اب سر کار کو ہندوستانی فوج کااعتبار نه رہا۔ سرکار وفت پاکر سب کو سزا دے گی اور اس سبب ہے تمام فوج کو اپنے افسروں کے فعل اور قول کا اعتبار اور اعتماد نہ تھا سب آپس میں کتے تھے کہ اس وقت تو بیہ الی باتیں ہیں جب ونت نکل جائے گاتو ہے سب آئیس بدل لیں گے۔ میں بہت معتبر بات کہ اہوں کہ دیلی میں جو فوج باغی جمع تھی، اس میں ہے ہزاروں آ دمیوں کو اس بے جاحرکت اور بے فائدہ بغاوت کا رنج تھا۔ وہ روتے تھے اور کہتے تھے کہ ہماری قسمت نے بیہ کام ہم سے کروایا پھر بہت افسوس سے کہتے تھے کہ اگر ہم نہ کرتے تو کیا کرتے۔ ایک نہ ایک دن سرکار ہم کو تباہ کر دیتی کیونکہ سرکار کو اب ہندوستانی فوج پر اعتاد نہیں رہ تھا۔ وہ قابو کا وقت جب پاتے ہم کو تباہ کر دیتے۔ ابتدائے غدر میں جبکہ ہنڈن پر فوج تکشی کا ارادہ ہوا ہے، ہنوز فوج روانہ نہ ہوئی تھی کہ بعضے آ دمیوں کی صاف رائے تھی کہ جس ونت دہلی پر فوج سے لڑائی شروع ہوئی بلاشبه تمام ہندوستانی نوج گروجائے گی چنانچہ نہی ہوا سبب اس کا نہی تھاکہ نوج سے لڑائی شروع ہونے کے بعد ممکن نہ تھا کہ باقی فوج سرکارے مطمئن رہتی وہ ضرور مجھتے تھے کہ جب ہمارے بھائی بندوں کو مارلیں گے تب ہم پر متوجہ ہوں گے اس لئے سب نے فساد پر کمر باندھ لی اور بکڑتے گئے جن کے دل میں پچھ فساد نہ تھا وہ بھی بسبب شامل ہونے فوج کے اس جینتہ سے الگ نہ ہوسکے۔ ہندوستانی رعایا جانتی تھی کہ سرکار کے یاس جو کچھ ہے وہ ہندومتانی فوج ہے۔ جب تمام فوج کا بگڑنا مشہور ہو گیاسب نے سر اٹھ یا عملداری کا ڈر دلول سے جاتا رہااور سب جگہ فساد بریا ہو serving a rebellious chief was not considered equivalent to an act of rebellion.

This notion had taken deep root in the native mind in times previous to the Company's rule when chiefs fought with each other and when engaging in the military service of either party was not considered as a crime. The second sort of revolt was indeed of a serious nature, but this bad feeling was exclusively confined to the above mentioned rebellious chiefs and was never general. As far as I know the population of no part of the NWP tried or even thought of rendering any assistance to the native rebellious chiefs, much less than of subventing the British rule. A great proof of the justice of this assertion lies in the fact that as soon as the mutinious troops and the rebellions chiefs were expelled from a District peace was immediately restored.

I therefore think that the mutiny of 1857 was not a popular rebellion. To a European mind unacquainted with the state of India, the very name of rebellion at once carries with it an idea that the people of the country must have taken part, in it, and the real facts are thus ignored.

With feelings of sincere regard, and hoping the above will suffice to give you some idea of my humble opinion.

the respectable families, without the void they left being filled up by others-the non-existence of any means by which the the native community could procure honourable situations, and more especially-the forfeiture of the Muafee (right of holding lands without paying any rent to Govt.) which act of the authorities was considered a great injustice by the natives; and lastly to some other causes of less importance, It may also be safely asserted that the Govt's exercise of the "right of Predominant Power" a power subject to no regulations and unlimited, and the interference in a way till then unknown, in the cases of adoption and lapse, had created a distrust in the minds of the native chiefs who perhaps did no longer think themselves secure. It does however by no means appear that even this stimulated them to revolt or to take any part in the rebellion, for no native chiefs whatever who were in possession of their principalities, not withstanding the distrust with which they looked upon the Company's rule committed themselves by any act of rebellion against the government. Quitting the subject of the Military Mutiny I shall now briefly describe the character of the rebellion in NW Provinces. The rebellion in the NWP was assumed these forms:

Ist Robbers and dacoits who were kept down by the power and strength of the Govt, now assembling in numbers not only attacked wayfarers but also plundered villages and even towns.

2nd Some of the minor chiefs whose families had fallen into decay endeavoured the resuscitation of their ancestral power. This sort of mutiny occurred in few places only: Cawnpore, Bareilly, Bijnour and Furruk habad. Some of these parties tried to have themselves restored while others were compelled by the mutineers to make an effort.

3rd Some of the lower classes, variously employed entered the service of such rebellious chiefs.

The first kind of rebellion cannot strictly be deemed against the Govt. The third sort of rebellion also although undoubtedly a crime cannot be called a regular rebellion, if we take into consideration the then state of India where

21 Mecklenburgh Sq. W.C. 14th Dec. 1869

My Dear Sir,

"...In yours now under reply you honour me by asking my opinion "as to the extent to which the mutiny of 1857 grew into a popular rebellion in the N.W. Provinces" and express your opinion that it was not a mere "Military Mutiny". As far as my personal knowledge extends respecting the sepoy revolt in 1857, and from all that I have learnt from investigation I find that even the use of the expression "Military Mutiny" conveys an idea of something more than the real fact. It cannot be denied that the use of the greased cartridges did violence to the superstition of the sepays who consequently determined not to bite the same. Almost all the sepoys had unanimously resolved never to bite the cartridge, which determination was the only charge that could be brought against them, till a very severe punishment was inflicted upon them at Meerul, a punishment which produced a strong impression on the minds of these men that they must either bite the greased cartridges or suffer the punishment of their disobedience. And it was then and not before that the discontent of the sepoys grew into a Military Mutiny. I am strongly of opinion that, if before the infliction of punishment the alternative either of biting the cartridges or resigning the service had been offered to them, the sepoys would undoubtedly have peaceably withdrawn themselves from the Company's service.

If the real facts connected with the revolt in the NVP be calmly enquired into, I do not think that the events which happened there can properly be designated as "Popular rebellion".

Undoubtedly the people of the NWP were dissatisfied with the Company's rule and this in a great measure was owing to the following causes: - the decay of

Sir Syed's Letter To Sir John Kaye 14 Dec. 1869. My father got this village, and he sowed his crops in peace—
But I was young and hot of blood, it was no life for me,
So I took to the hills of Malwa, and became a Pindarce.
Praise to the name Almighty, there is no God but one.
Mahomed is his prophet, and his will shall ever be done—
Ye shall take no use for money, nor your faith for lucre sell,
Ye shall make no terms with the infidel, but smite his soul to Hell,
Tell me, ye men of Islam, who are living in slavish ease,
Who wrangle before the Firingee, for a poor man's lost rupecs—
Are ye better than were your fathers, who plundered with old Chetoo,

And squeezed the greedy traders as the traders now squeeze you?

Down there a Mahajan lives, my rather gave him a bill,

I have paid the man thrice over, and here I am paying him still,

He shows me a long stamp paper, and must have my land, must he?

If I were twenty year younger, he sh'd get six feet by three,

And if I were forty year younger, and my life before me to choose

I would'nt be lectured by kafirs, or bullied by fat Hindoos,

But I'd go to some far off country, where Mussalmen still are men,

Or take to the forest like Chetoo, and die in a tiger's den.

As he asks of our manners and customs, I tell him a parcel of lies. "Look," says the school Firingee, "what a silly old man you be, You can't read, write, nor cipher, and your grandsons do all three. They'll check the Mahajan's figures, and reckon the tenant's corn. And read good books about London, and the world afore you were born."

Well—I may be old and foolish, for I've seventy years well told, And the Sahibs have governed me forty, so my heart and hands got cold,

Good boys they are my grandsons, I know, but they'll never be men, Such as I was at twenty-five, wher the sword was King of the pen, Ah—I rode a Deceance charger, with the saddle cloth gold laced, And a Persian sword, and a twelve foot spear, and a pistol at my waist.—

My son he keeps a tattoo, and I grieve to see him astride, Jogging away to cutchery, and swaying from side to side.
My father was an Affghan, and came from Candahar,
He rode with Nawab Amir Khan in the old Mahratta war.
From the Decean to the Himalayas, five hundred of one clan,
They asked no leave from king or chief, as they swept o'er Hindostan.

My mother was a Brahmince, but held to my father well,
She was saved from the sack of Jaleysir, when a thousand Hindoo fell—

Her kin had died in the sally, so she followed where he went And lived like a bold Patthance in the shade of a rider's tent. It's many a year gone bye now, but yet I often dream O, a long dark march to the Jumpa, and splashing across the stream.

The waving moon on the water, and the spears in the dim starlight,

As I rode in front of my mother, and wondered at the sight. But the British chased Ameer Khan, and the roving times must cease, means of their education, and H. H. therefore notifies the above to H. Majesty's loyal subjects that they may rest well assured of the good intentions of the Government towards them, and take heart and work contentedly praying to God sincerely for the prosperity of their benign Government.

THE OLD PINDAREE.

Allah is great, my children, and kind to a slave like me,
The big Saheb's tent has gone from under the Peepul tree,
With his horde of hungry chuprasees, and oily sons of the quill—
I paid them the bribe they wanted, and Satan will settle my bill.
It's not that I care for money, or expect a dog to be clean,
If I were lord of the Ryots, they'd starge ere I grew lean—
But I'd sooner be robbed by a tall man, who shew'd me a yard of sted Than be fleeced by a smoking Baboo, with a peon and badge at his heel.

There goes my lord the Firingee, who tall; so civil and bland,
But raves like a soul in Jehannum, if I don't quite understand—
He begins by calling me Sahib, and ends by calling me fool,
He has taken my old sword from me, and tells me to set up a school,

Set up a school in the village, "and my wishes are," says he,
"That you'll make the boys learn reg lar, or you'll get a lesson

ing that the natives of India are generally ignorant and therefore live in want, the Supreme Government has been pleased to establish Schools and Colleges for their education in Sciences and Arts of life, and for the amelioration of their condition in general, and to appoint Inspectors and native subordinates to superintend the work, so that the people may earn their bread more comfortably and live in a better style.

It is a well known fact that the people of England, by their advancement in learning, are able to do every thing properly, whereas the people of India owing to their ignorance can do nothing. If knowledge be generally diffused among them, all would live much more comfortably than they do now. It is a matter of great regret that the people have misunderstood the policy and the good intertions of Government in matters of education. His Honor however believes that the origin of all these exils is a misapprehebsion on the part of the natives, and that they do not praceed from prejudices or ill feelings. Be it known that by the spread of English education Government is simply desirous of opening to the people of India a path to all arts and Sciences, and not to mislead them from their religion and time-honored customs and habits. It must however be well borne in mind that works relating to all arts and Sciences at present exist only in the English language, and new discoveries and inventions are every day being brought to light. Moreover, English being the language of the rulers of the country it is one of the duties of the subjects to learn it de og with Urdoo or Bengari, so that they may rise in honor at the in greater case and comfort. The native tongue of the contry has been adopted as the language of the Court with a ven that the common people may be able to understand their proceedings.

His Honor the Lieutenant Governor having seen and heard much about the state of the country and the condition of the people is determined to do his best in their behalf, and to raise all high, instead of interfering in the religious rites and ceremonies of any class of its subjects, always regards them all as equal in its sight. The proceedings of the Christian Ministers above alluded to are part of their ordinary duties. They are in fact lectures of the same kind as are generally delivered in Muhamadan Mosques and Hindoo temples on subjects bearing upon faith. A little consideration will shew that there is nothing new in the matter, that discussions on religious subjects are common amongst the votaries of different faiths, and that the Government has no concern with them.

The reports, spread in some News-papers that all the Muharrum ceremonies, the parda system of the Zenana, the rite of circumcission and other rites and ceremonies practised under Muhamadan and Hindoos Laws are soon to be done away with hy process of Government must be considered as false and fabricated stories. These reports have no ground whatever. The Government cannot possibly meddle with these ceremonies.

To distinguish the Jail from the home, certain Jail Superintendents, ignorant of the customs and creeds of the country, livested prisoners of their necessary utensils used in eating and trinking, and of course without the knowledge and consent of the Government. But no sooner was this brought to notice of Government than orders were telegraphed to put a stop to their proceedings.

His Honor has been further given to understand that he inhabitants of this country regard the establishment of Schools and Colleges for the education of the natives in Arts and Sciences and in the English language as a means to mislead them from heir faith, and that for this reason they are disinclined to send heir children to School. This is undoubtedly a great mistake of theirs. The step has been misunderstood by the people Know-

TRANSLATION OF A PERSIAN NOTICE ISSUED BY H. H. THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF BENGAL.

His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, having heard! that the people of the Country are unnecessarily apprehensive and uneasy on account of certain unreasonable and unfounded stories, fabricated and spread by people equally unreasonable and prejudiced, with regard to the religious rites and ceremonies of the Hindoos and Muhamadans, hereby notifies that Government has no intention of interfering in the matters of religion, rites and cermonies of the country, nor can it ever have such an intention. His Honor is somy to find that the people of this country are unnecessarily alarmed at stories invented by seditions persons, and that they do not try to ascertain the truth. He hopes that when the facts are made known to them, all suspicions will be removed from their minds, and that they will rest assured as regards the intentions of the Government towards them. The principal object of the Government is and ever shall be to protect the life, honor, and property of its subjects, to respect their laws and customs and to do what it can to promote 'their welfare.

Some of the Calcutta Missionaries have, as is their wont, but without the sanction of the Government, published religious discourses and circulated them amongst the natives who have an ingly understood them to have come indirectly from the Government. The Government has however had no hand in the affair. No attempt was ever made on behalf of Government to persuade the natives to embrace the faith professed by the Government. It is evident that the inhabitants of this country belong to different races and profess different creeds and religions, and are governed by different laws. They have how been long wer it and examine it in private; do so with others also to whom is well as to yourself, this letter is addressed; confine your attendor to the one point, whether or not those persons are to be believed who said they saw Jesus Christ after He had risen from the dead: If you do so, you will be convinced by all, the rules of evidence, that Jesus Christ did rise from the dead, and that therefore the Gospel is a true and the only Revelation from God.

Then be courageous and embrace it publicly: for He said Himself "whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed when He cometh in the Glory of His Father with the Holy Angels." We long to see churches thronged with the natives of this land, in which the glad tidings of the Gospel shall regularly be proclaimed by your own countrymen, and not by strangers only; in which women, as well as men, shall be urged to repent of their sins, and to prepare to meet their God; in which children shall be taught lessons of morality and truth, to guide their conduct in this world, and lessons of holiness and peace to fit them for the next, and in which death shall be spoken of as an enemy no longer to be feared, for his sting has been taken away by "Our Saviour Jesus Christ who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel." That this will yet be the case we are assured by God himself: we long for the time when it shall be fully realized. Why not in this generation? Would it not be an infinite improvement upon the foolish, degrading and wicked idolatry, which now defiles the land? "We speak as to wise men, judge ye what we say."

do not possess, is that of the public; it may be said why did Her not show Himself publicly to all, especially to those persons which put Him to death? Various reasons may be assigned for this, derived from the nature of the doctrine which He taught; into these it is impossible at present to enter; but it must be observed, that the want of this evidence in no way affects the truth of that i which we do possess: if a number of persons who knew Hm! intimately, serve Him and spoke to Him, and atc with Him upor several occasions, it certainly does not tend to shake their evidence to ask, why did not others see Him also? Whenever He appeared all who were present at that place at that time saw Him, upon one occasion to the number of 500! So that it was not an apparition but a reality. One person, by name Thomas, said that he would no believe that it was really his old friend, till he had put his hanc into the heles caused by the nails in His hands, and into that caus ed by the spear in His side; but even he was satisfied!

We carnestly entreat you to consider these facts; if there is any flaw in the evidence, point it out; but if not, then admit that it is true, that Jesus Christ did rise from the dead,—and embrace the Gospel.

This resurrection of Jesus Christ is an assurance unto all menthat God hath appointed a day in which He will judge the work in righteousness; you will then stand before Him; you will be called up in to answer for the evil thoughts, the evil words, and the evil actions of which you have been guilty. Are you prepared to do so? There is no man living who is. But all guilt is pared and in the case of every one who trust, in Jesus Christ as His Savieur, for holiness is conferred upon him likewise, so that he will be prepared even for that dreadful day.

We unge you, therefore, as you value your own happiness for ever, to examine this great subject, and to ask God himself to mable you, by His Holy Spirit's teaching, to do so aright. Think cople by whom, he had been crucified; they had nothing to gain this declaration, but every thing to lose, not improbably their on is lives, and yet they persuaded some thousands of persons that what they said was true—so much so that the name of this despised and hated man was now, by those who had rejected Him, worshipped and revered; they continued telling the same fact as long as they lived, not only in Judea, but over all the Roman Empire: many of them showed their sincerity by allowing themselves to be put to torture and death for saying so, when they might have escaped, had they only said it was false: though ignorant and unlettered men, they persuaded thodsands, all over the Empire, to believe them, to forsake their own religion, and to embrace the one they taught, not withstanding scorn and death: they held out no promises of carthly comfort and honor to induce men to believe them, but rather the centrary: they were not satisfied with a formal adhesion to their views; but they required self-devial and holiness of life, which all men naturally dislike; they said that even the new religion would not save any man; and yet though they thus grined nothing themselves, and told others that they must not expect to gain anything either, they satisfied men that Jesus did rise again! and this so effectually, that from the most obscure corner of the Roman Empire, the doctrine preached by uneducated fishermen, about a poor carpenter's son, spread over the whole Empire even after their death, and overthrew every other system of religion though sanctioned by the consent of ages!

We have likewise the evidence of persons who did not become preachers of the New Doctrine, to prove the fact of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ; the soldiers who were placed as a guard at the grave saw it, and told the priests of it, and they found it necessary to invent an absurd story to account for the admitted disappearance of the body!

The only evidence which any person could desire, which we H and therefore, this solvent and carnest appeal is made to you to examine this important enhiest for yourself. The arguments in its favour are very numerous; this paper will dwell only upon one of them, but that one will be quite sufficient to establish the point.

A man called Jesus was born in a place called Pethleham, in the land of Judea, about 1159 years ago. He was a man of low birth, and in poor circumstances, but he professed to lead teacher sent by God to point out the only way which would lead unto God. After going about the country for three years preaching, he was put to death by the Roman Government at the solicitation of the Jewish Priests. So far all is admitted universally: the death of Jesus is a fact, as the death of Julius Cæsar is a fact, and no person thinks of doubting the one fact more than the other. The Jews, the greatest enemies of Jesus and his doctrine, glory in it, and they are the best witnesses we could desire.

His followers say, that he rose again from the dead. This is the one great fact upon which the whole system of Christianity depends; if it is true, the Gospel is true—for no person could rise from the dead except by the power of God, and God would not raise from the dead any person whose life and doctrine was not pleasing unto Him; if it is false, the Gospel is false.

We would respectfully and earnestly urge you to direct your-whole attention to this one point. Did Jesus rise from the dead, or did he not? We must bring witnesses of the fact, here they are. Peter, James, John, Matthew, Matthias, Thomas, Jude, Mary M. Aldene, Cleophas and 500 others, whose names are not now known. Many of these persons were the chosen friends, who had been constantly with Jesus for three years before his death; they could not therefore have been mistaken as to his person; they came forward within 50 days of his death and declared that he had usen again, in the very place where, and among the very

The the time appears to have come when earnest consideration should be given to the subject, whether or not all men should embrace the same system of Religion. Railways, Steam Vessels and the Electric Telegraph, are rapidly uniting all the nations of the earth: the more they are brought together, the more certain does the conclusion become, that all have the same wants, the same anxieties, the same hopes, the same fears, and therefore, the same nature and the same origin. It is also very certain that death universally closes the scene.

Is there, then, no means by which the sorrows and anxieties of life can be alleviated, and by which comfort can be given to all men in the hour of death? Is it rational to suppose that each nation is to find out a way for itself, by mere guess? or has the one God, who made all, appointed different methods of obtaining present and future happiness to different portions of His family? Surely, this cannot be.

Now Christianity is a system which professes to have come by direct revelation from God Himself, as the only system by which happiness can be secured in this world, or in that other world which it reveals. It has this peculiarity to distinguish it from every other system of religion in the world, that it appeals to the reason as well as to the heart of man, and it is the only system in the world, which has spread by the mere force of argument. The nations which believe in it are the most thoughtful and the most civilised in the earth, so that it; has, at all events, a claim to be heard on its own behalf.

Having received the greatest blessings from it ourselves, we are anxious that others also should be induced to receive them,

Let us now see how these opinions of mine affect the rebellion,

Why the mutiny did not break out in the Punjab and its causes.

or "part rebellion" which took place in the Punjab. The Mahommadans there had been greatly oppressed by the Sikhs, and had received no injury at the hands of the British. When the British first took the country, oppression was rife. This was day by day decreasing, whilst the contrary was the case in Hindus- in tau proper. The whole of the Punjab, when first annexed, was :: disarmed, and thus the weapons necessary for rebellion were not ! forthcoming. The Sikhs too, though not so wealthy as in former days, had still sufficient to live upon, chiefly from monies which they had inherited. The poverty which was rife in Hludustan had not yet had time to become rife in the Punjab. Besides these there were other cogent reasons, why the Punjab remained tranquil. Firstly, there was a powerful European army on the spot, Secondly, the wisdom shewn by the officials in at once disarming the sepoys. Thirdly, the number of the rivers and the shutting up of the ferries on them, which rendered the few who did rebel, powerless. Fourthly, all the Sikhs, Punjabees and Pathans, who might otherwise have tried their hand at rebellion, had already taken service or were being formed into corps and the desire for the plunder of Hindustan was strong on them. We thus find that the service which the people of Iudia took in the rebel army under such difficulty and changes was easily obtained in Government service in the Punjab. The circumstances of the Punjab were quite different from those of Hindustan proper.

Want of confidence unthe Indian forces towards Government after the occurrences of Meerut.

of the Sepoys increased. The whole army felt that their confidence in Government was at an end, that Government was only waiting for an opportunity to punish them all and hence it was that their confidence in what their officers did and said was scattered to the winds. They used to say, "Government says this and that just at present, but when all is quiet again it will not do what it says it will do" I state on the best authority that thousands of the Sepoys who composed the rebel army in Delhi, were sorry for the acts that had been committed and for having rebelled so insanely. Whilst the seige was going on they used to say with tears in their eyes that fate had caused them to do this. "What could we do," said they, "except rebel?" We were never sure what punishment was not in store for us as Government had no confidence in us On an opportunity offering, we should have been compeiled to do anything."- At the commencement of the rebellion, when it was known that a force was going to be sent out towards the river Hindan but before any force, had gone out, many stated it to be their conviction that when the two opposing forces met, the whole of the native portion would desert from the British. This was verified by the result; and the reason for it was, that when it came to fighting against their brethern, no one would remain true as they said when with our aid the English conquer our comrades, they will then turn their attention to us! All therefore joined in the rebellion, even those who wished to remain faithful to their salt, were carried away by the majority. Now the people were perfectly well aware that the Government were almost entirely dependent on the Sepoy army; when therefore it became known that, that army had revolted, the people also became riotous. They no longer were in awe of the Government.

take away their caste and had dismissed those who had justly stood out for their-rights. There was however, no open rebellion just then as they had only been disbanded and had not been treated with greater severity; but, partly from feeling certain that the cartridges were mixed with fat, partly from grief at seeing their comrades disbanded at Barrackpore and still more by reason of their pride, arrogance and vanity, the whole army was determined, come what might, not to bite the cartridges.

They remembered their services and thought now they had been recompensed, and their pride, which as I have before said was the feeling of the whole army, caused them to feel the degradation all the more keenly. Then the rest of the troops at Meerut were fully persuaded that they would either be compelled to bite the cartridges or undergo the same punishment. This rage and grief led to the fearful events of the 10th of May which events are unparalleled in the annals of history. After committing themselves thus, the mutineers had no choice left but to continue in their career of rebellion.

When the news of the outbreak became known the irritation

If a portion of the regiment engaged in anything, all the rest joined. If separate regiments of Hindoos and separate regiments of Mahommadans had been raised, this feeling of brotherhood could not have arisen and, in my opinion, the Mahommadan regiments would not have refused to receive the new cartridges. the paucity of the European element, the people of India only stood in awe of the Sepoys who thus became puffed up with pride and thought that there were noue like them in the world. They looked upon the European portion of the army as a myth and thought that the many victories which the English had gained were gained entirely by their own prowess. A common saying of their's was, that they had enabled the English to conquer Hindustan from Burmah to Cabul. This pride of the Sepoys was most marked after the Punjab was conquered. So far had it gone that they made objections to anything which they did not like, and I believe even remonstrated when ordered to march consequent on the yearly reliefs. It was precisely at-this time, when the army was imbued with this feeling of pride and the knowledge or rather conjecture that Government would grant anything they stood out for, that the new cartridges were issued, cartridges, which they really believed were made up with fat and the using of which would destroy their They refused to bite them. . When the regiment at Barrackpore was disbanded and the general order announcing the same was read out to each regiment, the deepest grief was felt throughout the army. They thought that the refusal to bite the cartridges, the biting of which would have destroyed their caste, was no crime at all, that the men of the disbanded regiment were not in the least to blame and that their disbandment was an act utterly devoid of justice on the part of Government. The whole army deeply regretted ever having had anything to do with Government. They felt that they had shed their blood in its cause and conquered many countries for it, that in return it wished to

Emperor of Delhi had ascended the throne, they presented then selves, and when he was deposed and imprisoned, men knew perfectly well that the same people would tender their allegiance to the English. The rebel army itself might perhaps not do this, but the reasons for their not doing so need not be treated of here.

CAUSE V

The Insubordinute state of the Indian Forces.

The English army system in India has always been faulty and one great fault was the paucity of English troops. When Nadir Shah conquered Khorassan and became master of the two The pancity of the kingdoms of Persia and Affghanistan, he in-English forces. variably kept the two armies at equal strength. The one consisted or rather was composed of Persians and Kuzul Bashies, and the other was composed of Affghans. When the Persian army attempted to rise, the Affghan army was at hand to quell the rebellion and vice versa. The English did not follow this precedent in India. The Sepoy army was no doubt faithful in its day and served the Government well, but how could Government feel certain that it would never act contrary to its orders? What measures had Government taken for quelling at once on the spot any emente in that vast army, such as that which happened last year?

magnified by their enemies, and the minds of the officials were worked upon and poisoned against them. The breach was thus widened, the English becoming more and more angry, and the Mahommadans more and more afraid and hopeless. It was their fate to have their actions misrepresented and to have the minds of their rulers poisoned against them. There were, no doubt, many Mahommadans who did rebel and whose rebellion we must enter in the V Class. These men were delighted at the prospect of a change of Government for reasons already shewn. Nevertheless Government are no doubt well aware what race it was and what men, that proved most faithful even unto death. All men are guilty, in His eyes, who is the only true Ruler

They are also guilty in the eyes of earthly kings, temporarily put in authority by Him.

The Psalmist has truly said, "Enter not into judgment with thy servant, for in thy sight shall no man living be justified." Psalm cxliii, 2. The promulgation of Her Majesty's Prochamation highly commendable indeed may be said to have originated under divine inspiration. proclamation has been inspired by Gcd. There is an ancient custom in Hindustan, which is that whenever a new king ascends the throne, rightly or wrongly, all the nobles of the land present themselves to pay their respects. This was the case in the rebellion. When the people heard that the thought wrong not to tender allegiance to a king who may have been proclaimed king in the place of another deposed The various kings and princes of Hindustan have never, on conquering an enemy's country, attached any blame to the servants, whether Civil or Military, of that enemy and the people were aware of this. When the leaders of the rebellion called for recruits, thousands of poor men wanting service, flocked in and took it. They thought there was nothing wrong in doing so, as their livelihood was procured by such service. Many thought that the British rule in Hindustan was at an end and that therefore it was their duty to tender their allegiance to the reigning powers i. e. to the rebels. Many officials also thought that lives would be spared by feigning to be on the rebel side and that when the British rule was re-established, they could throw off the mask. These men were however found guilty, although, undoubtedly many amongst them were true subjects of the British. Many also there were, servants of Government and others who, under compulsion, or through ignorance, or from being merely mortal, committed themselves, and then, thinking that their sin, committed perhaps under great temptation or perhaps under compulsion, would not be pardoned and would meet with severe punishment cast in their lot entitely with the rebels. Others, there were who had really done nothing; but through fear &c. joined the rebels. Many also as before stated, joined them thinking it no crime to do so. If the whole facts regarding the rebellion be thoroughly sifted, I feel certain that we shall find that just as many Hindoos were concerncal therein as Mahommadans, and the proof of this will be found in what took place all over Hindustan. It must not be supposed that the reason why, in some districts, the Mahommadans who rebelled were greater in number than the Hindoos, was that the King of Delhi, who was their head claimed the throne of Delhi or that they were in reality as rebellious as they seemed to be. No! small ucts said to have been committed by them were seized upon and men, faqueers (men of sanctity), poets, beggars or on the deserving poor, which latter expenditure was very popular. The discontinuance of the same by the British has displeased the people, especially the recipients, who from being always well cared for were unable to work for their bread. Now this system is undoubtedly bad as it makes the people lazy and not induced to help themselves, and much better is it that the rewards be discontinued and freedom be granted to the subject, that thus he may earn his daily bread himself; but this boon of freedom can only be appreciated when the people become educated and contented and not all at once. It is like taking the reins out of a horse's mouth, turning him loose and turning him out into the jungle to find his food for himself. What is the result? He either dies or remains a wild animal all his days giving the rein to his passions. If a man be thus treated he will either rob, murder or rebel.

Men's minds under the influence of anger are apt to lose sight of the true causes of any event and to be warped by a desire for vengeance. The events of the year 1857 were no doubt so dreadful as to justify the feelings of anger and desire for vengeance which had full possession of the earts of the English during that awful year; but at the same time we must find out what, at that time, was the condition of Hindusan, how the rebellion really commenced, why it attained such a leight, and why, in certain districts more misled Mahommadans rebelled than in others. It must be borne in mind that for centuies past the condition of India has been unsettled, that from time immemorial, its people have been accustomed to flock in thousands to the standard of any powerful noble (Ameer) who attained any success in the field and that they never held their doing so to be criminal accepting responsible posts in the administration, of his country for the time being. It is well known in India that the taking of service is no offence. Whoever pays is served. It is

The facts of the rebellion in India appeared more serious to the authorities than they in reality trere, their causes.

The observation of these rules by Lords Auckland and Ellenborough a very proper one. the world. He however, made the kings of this world as a type of what He Himself is in order that man on seeing his sovereign, should recollect that there is the still greater one who made him. For this reason many wise and able men have laid down that the good qualities of the Almighty, such as bounty, kindness etc., should also be found represented in earthly Kings, hence the title "Shadowed of God" It is therefore, incumbent on earthly kings to treat their subjects with that bountiful liberality with which the Almighty has treated the whole world. It may appear at first sight bad policy to spend the public money in rewarding slight services, but in my humble opinion this practice is calculated to increase the loyalty of the subject and thus to render the empire more stable. It is a well-known saying that "kindness and beneficence make slaves of men", therefore when the people see those virtues in their ruler, true love towards him and a desire to serve him faithfully and loyally are germinated in their hearts. We know from history that this was the case in olden days and under various dynasties in India, and that the nobles and the people at large had honors and gifts, such as titles. money, land and other valuables, bestowed upon them with no sparing hand. The recipients felt honored and pleased, were held in greater honor by their brethern, and the nation at large liked the practice, as being one which had come down to them from remote ages. Government put a stop to this and no one could expect much in the way of rewards and honors from it. When, therefore, the people heard that the Government of India had been formally assumed by Her Majesty Queen Victoria, they rejoiced as they were longing for a change.

The expenses of former rulers of India were of two sorts, viz, money spent on their own private luxuries and debauches which were undoubtedly wrong and disapproved of by the people, and that spent in rewarding faithful servants, victorious generals, learned appointed to high posts who, in the estimation of their countrymen are very small indeed. In the giving of certificates very little was thought of family and honor. Lord Bentinck did most for the advancement of the natives in this respect, but the high appointments which he bestowed upon a select few were utterly inadequate to the wants of the people. English officers of the highest rank have often admitted this of late years. Now is the passing an examination a sim qua non in England? are the best English statesmen invariably those who have passed high examinations? Are high diplomatic posts not often given to them on account of their birth and practical common sense and sometimes even without the latter qualification?

The people of India have, from time immemorial been always

The not holding of Durbars by the Governor General of India and not conferring rank and honor due to merit according to the usage of former emperoral of their Sovereign and have always enjoyed seeing his pomp and state and influence. This feeling of gladness at the sight of the sovereign is a feeling instinctively felt by every one. Man feels the power of the ruler when thus brought

Now although the Governor General of India was certainly, whilst on tour, in the habit of holding durbars, still the few that he did hold were not sufficient for the wants of the country, Lords Auck land and Ellenborough held right regal durbars. This perhaps may not have been approved of by the Home Government, but it was a most excellent thing for India, although even their durbars were too few in number. May the Almighty always watch over and protect our most gracious sovereign Queen Victoria and Her representation in India, His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General. Let us hope that the heartfelt wants of the natives of this country may be listened to and gradually satisfied.

The only real kingdom is that of the Almighty who created

India has been an honorable one. There is an element of shame in his disposition. He has no grasping desire for money, he esteems honor above all other things, and there are many proofs on record, which shew that the Mahommadan is not easily brought to do that, which, under the influence of temptation, other races in India will do without compunction. It may be that in this is wrong but God having instilled it into him, his is views and feelings cannot easily be changed. It may be unfortunate but, it is inculcated into them by their religion and is no fault of theirs. This illtreatment then it was which pained them grievously and which caused them heartily to wish for a change of Governors and to hear with joy of anything that was opposed to the present Government. It is much to be regretted that the Mahommadans did not know that Government was doing its utmost to further the interests, their education and to uphold their honor This they did not know, as the intentions and wishes of Government were never made known by their various officials.

Another great reason for the dissatisfaction of the natives of Exclusion of natives from premotion to high appointments Lord Bentinia's system of employing natives in high grades of acre vice an interprete one India and more especially of the Mahommadans, which the exclusion of matives from high appointments. A few short years ago Mahomadans fided the most honorable posts under their own Government and the desire and hope for such is still in them. Under the English Government they longed for the advancement of their honor in the case of the world, but there was no way open to them. In the case way, of this Gevernment, natives of rank were certainly singled out to find high posts, but by degrees this fell into disuse. The assertion by Mahommadans, that the practice of holding examinations is a bad one, is a mistaken one. If they have not the quality and a carble them to pass, they must not blame the system, undoubtedly the examination system goes far towards procuing an efficient staff of public servants, but many natives are presence of officials, but with an inward fear and trembling? Is a secret that the "Amlah" (native "court officials") are often addressed harshly and abused by their superiors whilst reading out papers to them.? These men, many of them of good birth, often inwardly exclaim "Oh! that I could gain my living otherwise, cutting grass by the wayside were better than this." I do not say that the behaviour of all English officials is like this. There are many who are well known for their kindness and friendly feeling toward the natives and these are in consequence much beloved by them, are, to use a native expression, as the sun and the moon to them, and are pointed out as types of the old race of officials.

These men truly follow the admonition of Christ Jesus who said to Simon called Peter and Andrew his brother when they were fishing "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men. They, by their good character have drawn the people to them, as it were, in a net, they have not treated them with useless arrogance, without which some think that a high position in the eyes of the natives cannot be kept up. They have earned that blessing which Christ enunciated: "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven "(Meth. V I). They have treated the people with 'gentleness and leniency and have ruled the land according to the precept "Blessed are the meek for they shall mherit the earth." Matt. V. 5. They have also let their light shine before men, as Christ enjoined in Matthew, V. 16. "Lee your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven."

Few in number, wherever they are, they are held dear by the natives.

The illtreatment people of India; but most especially so to the more repugnant to the feelings of the Mahommadans. The reasons for this are thear. Mahommadane, and its cause.

officials, it follows as a matter of course that the natives will judge of the temper of Government towards them by what they see of these officials. However good the intention of Government with regard to its subjects may be, unless these same officials give practical proof thereof by kind treatment of the natives, the people will not believe in them. Theory and practice are not one and the same. In these days, or rather within the last few years the feeling of officials towards natives is not nearly so favorable as was formerly the case. In olden days natives were treated with honor and in a friendly manner by these officials and, consequently to use a native expression "they carried their (the natives) hearts in their hands". They sympathized with them in their joys and sorrows, and this too, notwithstanding their high position. They were consequently greatly liked, and the natives used to say "How wonderful is this treatment from men in the highest position, who, though wielding the reins of empire are still without pride!"

Natives of rank were also treated in a highly honorable manner. They (the officials) really followed the precepts of St. Peter "And to Godliness brotherly kindness to brotherly kindness, charity." II Peter V. 7., the reverse of which is unfortunately the case as regards the greater number of the officials of the present day. Has not their pride and arrogance caused them to esteem the Hindustani as nothing in their eyes, and have not their ill-tempor and want of solicitude for the natives, caused them to be looked upon with dread by the latter? Is it not well-known to Government that even natives of the highest rank nover come into the Emperor Akbar I; and continued till the reign of Shah Jehan. No doubt, owing to many defects in the system of Government the people were subjected to many evils, but these were lightened by the feelings just mentioned. This feeling unfortunately ceased during the reign of Alumgeer, A. D. 1779, when, owing to the rebellion of several Hindoos of note, such as Sewajee, the Mahratta etc., Alumgeer vowed vengeance against them all and sent orders to all his Lieutenants to treat them with rigour and harshness and to exempt none from paying tribute. The injury and disaffection which therefore ensued are well known. Now the English Government has been in existence upwards of a century, and up to the present hour has not secured the affections of the people.

One great source of the stability of a Government is undoubtedly the treating of its subjects with hon-Treating the Indiour and thus gaining their affections. Though ans with contempt. a man's income be but small, treat him with honor and he is far more gratified than if he were presented with three or four times the amount than be treated with contempt. Contempt is an ineradicable wrong. Being treated contemptuously sinks deep into a man's heart, and although uninjured by the same as to his worldly goods, he still becomes an enemy. The wound rankles deep and cannot de healed, that given by a sword can be healed, but that inflicted by a contemptuous word can not. The results of kindness are different, an enemy even if treated courteously becomes a friend; friends by friendly intercourse, become greater friends, and strangers if treated in a friendly manner are no longer strangers. By kindness we make the brute creature our willing slaves, how much more then would such treatment cement the bonds between a Government and its people? Now in the first years of the British rule in India, the people were heartily in favor of it. This good feeling the Government has now forfeited and the natives very generally say that they are treated with contempt. A native gentleman is most undoubtedly have been its friend and supporters, instead of, as in many instances, rising up in arms against it. Now friendship is a feeling which springs from the heart and which cannot be kindled by "admonitions." Men may meet on very friendly terms, but it does not therefore follow that they are friends in the real sense of the word that they are friends at heart as well as in outward signs. This is a link, as it were, between heart, a man instinctively feels that he likes a man or the contrary. Government has hitherto kept itself as isolated from the people of India as if it had been the fire and they the dry grass, as if it thought that were the two brought in contact, the latter would be burnt up. It and its people were like two different sorts of stone, one white and the other black, which stones too were being daily more and more widely separated. Now the relations between them ought to have been close like those between the streaks of white and black in the stone called Abri in which we see the former close alongside of the latter, the one blending with the other. Government was of course perfectly right in maintaining special friendly relation with its Christian subjects (the English) but it was at the same time incumbent upon it to show towards its native subjects that brotherly kindness which the Apostle Paul exhorts us to in these words. "And to godliness brotherly kindness and to brotherly kindness charity" II Peter 1 7 It must be borne in mind, that the blood of the Mahommadan conquerors and that of the people of the country was not the same, that their faith was not the same, their manners and customs not the same; that in their hearts the people did not like them; and that at first there was little or no amalgamation of the two. What then was the secret of their becoming friends? Let us glance at the former Indian dynasties. First came that of the Mahommadan conquerors. In the reign of the Turks and Pathans, there was no intercourse between the conquerors and the conquered until the Government of the former was made irm and easy A teeling of cordiality was first established in the reign of the Moguldifferent and widely separated. And why was this? Just because they wished and did their utmost to become so. How often do we not see strifes and enmities between people of the same race, religion and customs. Friendship, intercourse and sympathy are therefore not wholly dependent for their existence merely on the giver's and recipient's being of the same religion, race or country.

Does not the 'Apostle' Paul admonish us in these beautiful words? "And the Lord make you to increase, and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you" 1st Epistle of Paul to the Thessalonians Ch. III verse 12. And does not Jesus admonish us in these? "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the Prophets" Matthew, VII 12.

These were meant to inculcate friendship and love to all men, and no one, no wise and thoughtful man will say that the admonition is wrong, that friendship and love to our fellow-men are not beneficial, that their results are wil, and that they do not blot out much that is wicked. As yet, truth compels me to state, Government has not cultivated the friendship of its people as was its duty to do. The Creator has instilled it into the heart of man and the instinct of animals that the strong should be kind to and care for the weak. The father loves his child before the child loves him. The man tries to win the woman, not the woman the man. If a man of low degree try to win the esteem of one in high position, he is liable to be styled a flatterer and not a friend. It was, therefore, for Government to try and win the friendship to its subjects, not for the subjects to try and win that of the Govern-If it had done so the results would have been great and the people would have rejoiced. Alas! that it has not done so. If Government say that what I say is untrue, that they have tried to cultivate friendship and have only been repaid with enmity, I can only say, that if it had gone the right way to work, its subjects would

I will now proceed to shew what duties Government ought it to have fulfilled and which it did not fulfil. -

I feel it most necessary to say that which is in my heart and which I believe to be true even at the risk of its being distasteful to many of the ruling race. Neglect in matters which should bare What I am now going to treat of is that received consideration of Government which if only done in a right way will attract even wild animals, causing them to love instead of to dread, and which therefore will, in a much greater degree, attract men. I caunot here state at length what the benefits of friendship, intercourse and sym pathy are, but I maintain that the maintenance of friendly relations between the governors and the governed is far more necessary than between individuals, private friendships only affect a few, friendship and good feeling between a Government and its subjects affects a nation. As in private friendships two persons are united by the

The people and the Government I may like to a tree, the latter being the root and the former the growth of that root. As the root is so will the tree be. What! Was such intimacy impossible under this Government? Most certainly not. We have numerous instances in which foreigners and natives of countries have been brought in contact with each other and of their becoming friends, even when their religions and countries were collecting the money to pay for that interest and the benefit which Government derived from the money borrowed was all taken from the country.

this country were great and powerful have, under this Government, been reduced to poverty. This was one great reason of the dissatisfaction felt in India and one great reason in my opinion

why they were inclined for a change of rulers. When the British were victorious in Affghanistan, the people mourned. Why was this? Because they thought that they would now be compelled to relinquish the cherished faith of their forefathers and become Christians When in addition to this Gwalior was conquered and the Punjab and Oudh anuexed, this fear gained ground. In these native states, natives were eligible for high public posts, and native wares were always saleable there. When therefore the native Courts of these states were done away with, these openings and aids to the people of India were cuddenly cut off. The English Government, had however, many, very many good points. I do not condemn it entirely. The feeling of security which the subject enjoys under the British rule, of ease and of freedom, the many good roads, the putting down of dacoitee, thuggee and highway robbery; the facilities afforded to travellers, the ease with which merchants could transport their goods to far off localities, the benefit to all, rich and poor alike, which accrued from the extension of the cheap postal system, the decrease of murders and deadly affrays, the protection of the poor from the oppression of the rich, these and many other blessings have never been enjoyed under any former Government, and in all probability never will. But it must be borne in mind that the benefits derived from the above do not efface the feeling that I have above pourtrayed. Another thing is that this good government benefits more especially merchants and women who have always been loud in their praises of it because it protected them from The consequence of this was, that when the mutineers wanted pounds of sterling were given away in presents. This is never done now a days and not only is it not the case now but even "jagits" (grants of land) bestowed on the recipients in former days have been forfeited. Having thus shewn the unsatisfactory state into which the Zemindars and cultivators have fallen, I must also state that petty artisans have suffered severely by the opening up of the trade with England, as they cannot of course compete with machinery. No one even thinks now-adays of buying country made thread or matches, and the country cloth weavers have been ruined. When by the Divine Will, Hindustan became an appauage of the Crown of Great Britain, it was the duty of Government to enquire into and lessen as much as possible the sufferings of its subjects. By not doing so many who would otherwise have been staunch friends of the British, joined the rebels.

The Brahmins never took service, the Vaishyas were always traders and bankers, the Kshatriyas, once lords of the land, never took service, but each kept his own small portion of land, dividing it amongst his kinsmen and preserving a semblance of authority. They had no standing army, but as occasion required they all united either to resist or to invade as the case might be, as was the custom in former days in Russia. Their was one caste certainly that did take service and these were the "Kayasths."

The Mahommadans are not the aborigines of this country. They

They were therefore all dependent on service, and on account of this increased difficulty in obtaining the same, they, far more than the Hindoos, were put to much inconvenience and misery. An honorable military service, distinct from that eagerly engaged in by the lower classes of the community, was with difficulty procurable under the British Government. The army, which was composed of sepoys, was not looked upon as a favorable field by the higher class of Mahommadans. True, service was obtainable by them in the Cavalry, but the number of posts in that branch of the service was small compared with what it had been in olden days. Formerly, besides Government service, employment was obtainable in the private retinues or households of Officers of State and large landholders, and these posts were well paid.

It is not so now, as the posts which are now filled by Englishmen do not entail upon the holders the necessity of keeping up a large retinue, and Englishmen, therefore, only have their own few private servants.

make themselves heard by means of petitions, these same petitions were seldom if ever aftended to and sometimes never even heard

Local suthorities officials, but even these officials themselves were generally unacquaint and with the condition of their subjects. In the people, because they had no means of getting at them. The behaviour of these subordinates as a rule, their pride and their treatment of, natives is well known. In their presence native gentlemen were afraid, and if they had told these officials of their want of knowledge of the people of their Districts, they would only have been summarily ejected for their pains. All the "Amlah" (readers and clerks) and the civil functionaries as well as wealthy native gentlemen were afraid and consequently did nothing but flatter.

Now Government, although in name only a Government subordinate to a higher Government, was in reality the real Government of this country, and, as such, it ought to have received the complaints and petitions of its people direct and not as it did invariably by reports from its district officers. These are some of the reasons why the real feelings and ways of its people, why the action of new laws passed for that people, their working for good or for bad, for the prosperity or otherwise of the countrymen were unknown or only slightly known to Government. The people were isolated, they had no champion to stand up for their rights and to see justice done to them, and they were constrained to weep in silence.

Overwhelming poverty of the Indians, is service. Now although every one felt the difhardicularly of the hardens. ficulty of getting service, this difficulty pressed most heavily on the Mahommadans. It must be borne in mind that the Hindoos, the original inhabitants of the country, were carried tell us how the Civil Courts work. Fifty years hence, we may compare the administration of the N. W. P. and the working of its Courts with the administration and Courts of the Punjab; at present the comparison cannot hold. I do not deny that the laws which regulate justice in Bengal and the N. W. P. are capable of improvement. Great delays occur in the decision of cases. The price of stamped paper, and various gradations of of appeal, render appeal too costly for the people. The powers of judges have been in certain respects unduly restricted. Act 19, of 1853 remedied this to some extent, but there is still norm for improvement. However, any one caring to see what I have to say on this subject, can read my book on the Government of Hindustan, in which work my views are given in extenso.

The ignorance of government of the state of the country and their subjects.

There was no Government of the state of the country, real communication between the Governors and their Lijects. and the governed, no living together or near one another as has always been the custom of the Mahommadans in countries which they subjected to their rule, Government and its officials have never adopted this course without which no real knowledge of the people can be gained. It is however not easy to see bow this can be done by the English as they almost all look forward to retirement in their native land and seldom settle for good amongst the natives of India.

The people again having no voice in the government of the country could not well better their condition, and if they did try to

Punjab no commentaries or constructions, for the purpose of explaining or elucidating the laws or adapting them to practice. Each individual judge is a light to himself: and unfortunately it does not happen that a judge is always right in his interpretation. To what confusion is such a state of things likely to lead in the course of time! The Civil Court is the tribunal in which the most implicit trust should be placed. It is the Civil Court on which depend the internal tranquillity of the kingdom, the safe transport of merchandize, the increase of trade, and the establishment of rights. But Punjab Officers pay very little attention to the Civil Courts. They have not indeed the time to do so. Cases requiring long and patient investigation, regarding transfers of right, and a variety of other matters, such as have sprung up in process of time under the English Government and are constantly recurring in the Civil Courts of these Provinces, are as yet unknown in the Punjab.* But when in course of time, such suits are brought into the Civil Courts of the Punjab, the laws by which the judges are at present guided will be found altogether inefficient. The Civil Courts, no doubt, have their share among causes of the rebellion but only in connection with two subjects. The one, the transfer of rights the other, the issue of decrees for debt. These led to internal riots, but they gave rise to no opposition against Government. They were lores which festered only in the breasts of the parties concerned. Such a state of things might have been expected. Whenever the reins of Government are loosened, the people always begin fighting with each other. Unjust transfers of land, and debts unjustly adjudged due, increased the confusion. Many men, moreover, had fallen victims to trumped up suits, and the blame of these fell upon the Civil Courts. But the incomplete and summary modes of investigation which prevail in the Punjab Civil Courts, and the wrongheadedness of the judges presiding in them have been productive of no less mischief. Ten years price of stamped paper, which reached its highest amount under Regulation 10, of 1829, were entirely opposed to the spirit of Hindustance customs. Taking into consideration the general poverty of the Hindustanees, the measure seems to me to have been very unwise. This question of stamped paper has long been an open one, and strong arguments have not been wanting to shew the miscnief of the practice, and to prove that it is opposed to all sound rules of Political Economy. This however is a question I shall not discuss here. I would only remark that the question as hitherto argued has had reference to countries, where the people were educated, wealthy, and intelligent. It is easy to see that the Hindustanees, who are becoming more and more impoverished every day, can never hope to bear up under this expense. This system of using stamped paper is one which has been disapproved of by most men of reflection. They argue that to whatever extent it may be unjust to levy a tax on lands, title-deeds, and so on; so much the more is it unwise to kevy a tax upon papers intended to aid in the furtherance of justice. Besides the heavy expenses which this system entails, it tends greatly to hinder the actual administration of justice. Mr. Mill, in his book on Political Economy, and Lord Brougham in his work on Political Philosophy have expressed their disapproval of the system, and it must be remembered that all arguments urged against its practice in Europe, carry with them a tenfold force when applied to Hindustan.

deserve much praise. They have had nothing to do with the late Rebellion. I know that many Government officers will differ from me on this point, and will prefer the system which has been adopted in the Punjab. But this is a matter which is open to a good deal of doubt. The laws in force in the Punjab are very vague and sketchy. There exist in the

The cultivators were obliged to borrow money in order to pay the revenue. The interest on these loans ran up Landlords, formerly men of substance, found themselves suddenly ruined Village, in which there happened to be land already lying uncultivated, became more than ever neglected. Mr. Thomason, in Paragraph 64 of his directions to Settlement Officers says that the Settlements under Regulation 9 of 1833 were light! on good villages, but pressed heavily on poorer ones. The landlords I admit, can no longer extort rent illegally, or make illicit profits, but they were entitled to more consideration than has been shewn them. Both they and the cultivators have suffered, and hence it is that, notwithstanding the security to life and property which they now enjoy, the landlords look back with regret on the dynasties of former days.

I will not say that to crush the Talookdars was an unjust measure, but it was one of the chief causes of The abolition of the Rebellion, and especially of the rebellion particularly in the in Oudh. The Talookdars had long enjoyed

th rank of Rajas. They exercised the rights sovereignty in the villages composing their Talookdaries: From these villages, their income was derived. All these rights, and all this income alik were suddenly wrested from them. Here, again, I shall not stop a equire what other steps could have been taken by Government a secure the undertenants from the appreciant of the Talookdars. I have elsewhere entered into the matter. I mere'y say now that the abolition of the Talookdars was among the causes of the resettion.

The practice of using stamped papers is peculiar to Europe, where land is scarcely looked upon as a means of stamp paper.

according to their respective shares. The second class was called "Paroti," and was not kept in constant cultivation, being occasionally allowed to lie fallow in order to strengthen it. The produce of this class of land he shared with the cultivators in such years as it was cultivated. The third class which was called "Chachar" remained uncultivated for 3 or 4 years, and required the expenditure of money in order to make it fertile." In the first year of cultivation, Akbar took two fifths of the produce from this land, increasing his demand yearly, till in the fifth year, he received his full share. The fourth class which was called "Bunjar," and required to lie fallow for more than five years, was treated on still more lenient terms. The way in which the money value of the crops was calculated was as follows. The crop of every beegah, and of every different kind of and was reckoned according to the weight of an average amount of grain produced by such land. For example the average crop of a beegah would be reckoned at 9 maunds of grain, a third of which, namely, 3 maunds would represent the demand of Government on the Cultivator. The grain would then be valued at the average of the price current; and a money rate fixed on the beegah accordingly. The great advantage of this system was, that if the cultivators considered the price fixed by the price tables more than the value of the corn, they had the option of paying in kind. The assessments imposed by the English Government have been fixed without any regard to their various contingencies. Land lying fallow pays in the same proportion as other land. Such lands as are for a time left uncultivated in order that they may acquire strength, are not considered free from assessment. From being cultivated to the same extent year after year land becomes weak and unfruitful, and does not yield an equal amount. It ceases to have the same value as was put upon it at the time of the Settlement. In many districts, every Settlement that was made pressed heavily, and landlords and cultivators were alike reduced to straits. In course of time they were on this question, he will find them in my work on the Government of Hindustan.* I will only mention here that it is open to grave doubt, whether the land is pledged for the payment of revenue. The claim of the Government lies, I take it, upon the produce of the land, not upon the land itself.

So too the practice of sale in satisfaction of debt has been most objectionable. Bankers, and money lenders have availed them selves of it to advance money to landlords, resorting to every kind of trickery and roguery, to rob them of their property. They have instituted suits without end in the Civil Courts, some fraudulent, some correct enough. The consequence has been that they have very generally ousted the old landlords, and insinuated themselves into their properties.† Troubles of this kind have ruined landlords throughout the length and breadth of the land.

The system of Revenue Settlements, introduced by the English Government does it the greatest credit. But it Heavy assessments is beavy compared with former Settlements. of lands. Formerly the revenue was realized by sharing the actual crop with the cultivator. Sher Shah claimed for Government one third of the produce of the land, and though this plan had its difficulties, and exposed the Government to some little risk yet the cultivators felt secure, and were little liable to loss. Akbar was the first regularly to adopt this plan of taking one third of the produce. It was by him that the system was matured as may be seen in Mr. Elphinstone's excellent work upon India, and in the Ain-i-akbari. Akbar divided the land into classes, and changed the payments in kind into money payments. The first class which goes by the name of "Pulich" was cultivated yearly, and the produce of this he divided with the cultivators compel the sale of these rights in satisfaction of arrears of revenue, or of debt, was a practice in those days unknown. Hindustance landlords are particularly attached to this kind of property. The loss of their estates has been to them a source of the deepest annoyance. A landed estate in Hindustan is very like a little kingdom. It has always been the practice to elect one man as the head over all. By him, matters requiring discussion are brought forward, and every shareholder in proportion to his holding, has the power of speaking out his mind on the point. The cultivators, and the Chowdries of the villages attend on such an occasion, and say whatever they have to say. Any matter of unusual importance is settled by the headmen of some of the larger villages. Yoù have here in fact in great perfection a miniature Kingdom, and Parliament. These landlords were indignant at the loss of their estate, as a king at the loss of his empire. But the Government acted in utter disregard of the state of things formerly existing. Dating from the commencement of English rule to the present time, there is probably not a single village, in which there have not been more or less transfers. In the first days of British rule, sales of landed property were so numerous, that the whole country was turned upside down. To remedy this, Government passed the law which is called Regulation 1 of 1821, and appointed a Commission of Enquiry. This Commission, however, gave rise to a thousand other THE REPORT OF THE PERSON NAMED IN COLUMN TWO IS NOT THE PERSON NAMED I evils. After all, the affair was not brought to a satisfactory conclusion, and, at last, the Commission was abolished. I shall not here enter into the question as to how Government could ensure the payment of the land revenue, if it gave up the practice of sales or its right to enforce sales as arising from the fact of the land being pledged for the payment of revenue. All that I now say is, that whether this system of sales was the result of necessity, or of ignorance, it has at all events had a hand in bringing on the rebellion. If any wish to see what my views and

The resumption of the last of which was regulation 6 of 1819, were most obnoxious. Nothing disgusted the natives of this country more with the English Government than this resumption of Revenue free lands. Sir T. Munro and the Duke of Wellington said truly enough that to resume lands granted revenue free, was to let the whole people against us, and to make beggars of the masses. I cannot describe the beginning and the hatred which this act brought on Government, or the extent to which it beggared the people. Many lands which had been held revenue free for centuries, were suddenly resumed on the flimsiest pretexts. The people said that Government not only did nothing for them itself, but undid what former Governments had done. This measure, altogether lost for the Government, the confidence of its subjects. It may be said that if revenue free lands were not resumed, some other source of income would have to be sought, or some new Tax imposed to meet the charges of Government: so that the people would have super the burthen. This may be so; but the people do not see it. It is a remarkable fact that wherever the rebels have issued proclamations to deceive and reduce the people, they have only mentioned two things: the one, interference in matters of religion, the other, the resumption of revenue free lands. It seems fair to infer that these were the two chief causes of the public discontent. More especially was it the case with the Muhammadans, on whom this grievance fell far more heavily than on the Hindus.

but it is none the less a fact that the Hindus, who cling particularly to the forms, and customs of their faith, were greatly annoyed at this Act. They thought that its provisions were little less than an insult to them. The suspicion arose that this act was intended to free widows from all restraint, and to give them the power of doing whatever they might, think proper. So too it would be impossible to overstate the disgust which was felt by all Hindustances at the Lence given to women in criminal actions, even married women were recognized to the Criminal Courts as competent. To give a married woman such liberty, was simply to Giving liberty to deprive her guardian of all power over her: and females. not only this but the measure was altogether opposed to the spirit of the existing religions. The remedy provided for such cases by a suit in the Civil Courts was little better than useless. Cases of this kind which according to our belief and practice should have met with prompt attention, were so delayed and deferred, that the remedy was nearly as bad as the grievance. The decrees of the Civil Court for the restoration of married women are very often waste paper. It often happens that a woman has borne two or three children to the man who abducted her, before her husband can find a trace of her whereabouts.

Moreover, certain acts and laws were passed which led to decisions in the Civil Courts opposed to the religious practice of litiThe promulgation gants, even where they happened to be of the of certain Acts in exact same faith. I would not have the Government wherein the parties same faith. I would not have the Government shew a partiality for any creed whatever. When parties to a suit are of different creeds, Government should be careful, provided that due respect is paid to the religious practice of the litigants, to ensure equal justice. When however the litigants are of the same creed, it is but right, that decrees, affecting rights, issued by the Courts should be in accordance with the religious practice of the parties.

But of all courses, the most unjust is to hinder the study of the tenets of their religion: and especially of such an one as is heartily believed by its votaries to be true. But he this as it may, all I wish here to prove is that whatever the intentions of Government might be, matters were so managed that the people were left to stumble on, in error, suspicion, and ill-will.

CAUSE II

"The passing of such laws, regulations and forms of procedure, as were inconsistent with the established customs and practice of Hindustan: and the introduction of such as were in themselves objectionable"

The Legislative Council is not free from the charge of having meddled with religious matters. Act The promulgation XXI of 1850, was without doubt prejudicial to of objectionable laws and procedures. the professors of other creeds. This act was Act 21 of 1850. thought to have been passed with the view of cozening men into Christianity. The Hindu faith, as is known, allows of no converts. To the Hindus, therefore this act brought no benefit. If a man again become a convert to Islam, he is forbidden by the laws of his new religion, from inheriting property left to him by men of another creed. No Muhammadan convert, therefore, could profit by this act. To such men, however, as became Christians it offered great advantages. Hence this act was said not only to interfere with people's religion, but to hold out strong inducements to conversion.

Act 15 of 1856 again, relating to Hindu widows was opposed Act 15 of 1856—to the practice of the Hindu religion. There is, I much controversy on this point, and there always has been:

Be sure that it will come. Are you not in Government employ?" Looking into the subject, one feels that this unhappy circular set the fluishing stroke to the public suspicion and ill-will. And yet again at this crisis there was no one at hand to set men's minds at rest. It will surprise no one to find that there should have been something very like conspiracy and more or less disturbance about this time. This was in fact the case. But the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal 3000 heard of it, and issued a Proclamation which soothed men's minds and put suspicion to sleep for a time. It was however but a temporary relief; men still thought that Government had given up its projects only for a while, but that when it found itself a little stronger, it would resume them.

All these causes rendered the Muhammadans more uneasy than the Hindus. The reason of this, I take to be that the Hindu faith consists rather in the practice of long established rites and forms, dans, and its causes. than in the study of doctrine. The Hindus recognize no canons and laws, or appeals to the heart and conscience. Their creed does not admit of such things. Hence it is that they are exceedingly indifferent about speculative doctrine. They insist upon nothing, excepting the strict observance of their old rites, and of their modes of eating and drinking. It does not annoy or grieve them, to see such rites and observances, as they consider necessary, disregarded by other men. Muhammadans, on the contrary, looking upon the tenets of their creed as necessary to Salvation; and upon the neglect of them as damnation, are thoroughly well-grounded in them. They regard their religious precepts as the ordinances of God. Hence it was that the Muhammadans were more uneasy than the Hindus, and that, as might have been expected, they formed the majority of the rebels. It is wrong and impolitic on the part of a Government to interfere in any way with the faith of its subjects.

Introduction of the messing system in the Jaila.

To the Muhammadan creed it was not actually obnoxious, nevertheless Muhammadans were annoyed at its introduction. They looked upon it as another proof that Government wished to meddle with all creeds alike. They saw in it but another part of one huge plan.

Whilst all these discontents were at their height, there suddenly appeared, in 1855, a letter by Mr. Edmond,* The circulation of which was circulated publicly from Calcutta, Mr. R. Edmond's letters from Calcutta. and a copy of which was sent to all the principal officials of Government. It was to the effect that all Hindustan was now under one rule, that the telegraph had so connect ed all parts of the country that they were as one, that the fail road had brought them so near that all towns were as one, the time had clearly come when there should be, but one faith; it was right therefore, that we should all become Christians. It is no metaphor to say that men were blinded with fear at the receipt of this Circular. The ground seemed at last to have given way beneath their feet. They cried out that the long-expected hour had indeed arrived. The servants of Government were first to be made Christians, then the mass of the people. This circular it was said was written by order of Government. Natives in Government employ were asked whether they had received the circular and this was in fact to taunt them with having turned Christians, on the condition of getting Government employ. The native officials were so ashamed of the circular that those to whom it had been sent, used to hide the fact from fear of being ridiculed and abused, and would deny having ever received it. They used to say "It has not been sent to us": and the answer used to be "well, well; equally taught. The "Fickah," ", Hadees" and other such books were read. Examinations were held in the "Fickah" for which certificates of proficie cy were given. Religion was not in any way thrust forward. The professors were men of worth and weight: all Scholars of great reputation, wide knowledge and sound moral character. But all this has been changed. The study of Arabic is little thought of. The "Fikah" and "Hadels" were suddenly dropped. Persian is almost entirely neglected. Books and methods of teaching have been changed. But the study of Urdu and of English has greatly increased. All this has tended to strengthen the idea that Government wished to wipe out the religions which it found in Hindustan. The professors are no longer men of weight or acquirements. Students at the College, in whom people have not gained confidence, have for some time past been appointed professors. And hence it is that throughout the country these Colleges have fallen into disrepute.

Such was the state of the village Schools and the Colleges.

The issue of Government proclamation on the subject of admitting Government College English students to appointments in preference to other candidates. Such the general feeling of distrust throughout the country as to the views of Government about conversion, when a proclamation was issued by Government to the following effect. Whoever had studied and passed an examination in certain Sciences, and in the English language, and had received a Certificate to that effect, was to be considered as having prior claims for employment in the Public Service. Petty appointments were granted on the production of certificates from the Deputy Inspectors: the very men who had hitherto been nicknamed Native Clergymen. This came as a blow to every one. Suspicion increased tenfold. The rumour again arose that Government wished to deprive the Hindustanees of all means of subsistence and by impoverishing them gradually, to substitute its own religion in the place of theirs.

reading only Uniu would forget the tenets of their own faith, and that they would thus drift into Christianity. They believed also, that Government wished such books as bore upon the doctrines of the former religions of Hindustan, to fall into entire disuse. This was to be done with the view of ensuring the spread of Christianity. In many of the Eastern districts of Hindustan where these Schools were established, boys were entered at them by compulsion, and by compulsion only. It was currently reported that all this was in pursuance of the orders of Government.

The introduction of female education. Men believed it to be the wish of Government, that girls should attend, and be taught at these Schools, and leave off the habit of sitting veiled. Anything more obnoxious than this to the feelings of the Hindustanees cannot be conceived. In some districts the practice was actually introduced. The pergunnah visitors and Deputy Inspectors hoped by enforcing the attendance of girls, to gain credit with their, Superior In every way, therefore, right or wrong, they tried to carry out their object. Here then was another cause of discontent among the people, through which they became confirmed in error.

Alterations in the usual system of education in large Colleges.

Moulvie of Hindustan was alive. The Muhammadans asked him for a Futwah on the subject.

He answer was distinct. "Go," he said, "Read in the English Colleges, and learn the English Tongue. The laws of Islam admit it." A ting on this opinion the Muhammadans did not hesitate to enter these Colleges. At that time, however, the Colleges were conducted on a principle widely different from that which is at pie eat adopted. Arabic, Persian, Sanskrit, and English, were of the Christian faith were taught. Men said it was by the order of Government. In some districts covenanted officers of high position and of great influence used to visit the schools and encourage the people to attend them; Examinations were held in books which taught the tenets of the Christian religion. Lads who attended the schools used to be asked such questions as the follow ing "who is your God?" "Who is your Redeemer," and these questions they were obliged to answer agreeably to the Christian belief; prizes being given accordingly. This again added to the prevailing ill-will: But it may be said with some justice, "If the people were not satisfied with this course of education, why did they let their children go to the schools?" The fact is that we have here no question of like or dislike. On the contrary we must account for this by the painfully degraded and ignorant state of the people. They believed that if their children were entered at the schools, they might have employment given them by Government, and be enabled to find some means of subsistence. Hence they put up with a state of affairs in reality disagreeable enough to them. But it must not be thought that they ever liked those schools

When the village Schools were established, the general belief was that they were instituted solely with the view of teaching the doctrines of Jesus. The pergunnah visitors, and deputy inspectors, who use! to go from village to village, and town to town advising the people to enter their children at these Schools, got the nickname of Native Clergyman.
When the Pergunnah visitor, or Deputy Inspector entered any village the people used to say that the Native Clergyman had come.
Their sole idea was that these were Christian Schools, established with the view of converting them. Well-informed men, although they did not credit this, saw nevertheless that in these Schools nothing but Urdu was taught. They were afraid that boys while Jien of a different faith were spoken of in those tracts in a most offensive and irritating way. Hindustan these things have always been managed very differently Every man in this country, preaches and explains his views in his own Mosque, or his own house. If any one wishes to listen to him, he can go to the Mosque, or house, and hear what he has to say. But the Missionaries' plan was exactly the opposite. They used to attend places of public resort, markets for instance, and fairs where men of different creeds were collected together, and used to begin preaching there. It was only from fear of the authorities that no one lid them be off about their business. In some districts the Missionanes were actually attended by Policemen from the station. And then the Missionaries did not confine themselves to explaining the doctrines of their own books. In violent and unmeasured lang-.. ip they attacked the followers and the holy places of other creeds: and the dealing beyond expression the feelings of those who listened to them. In this way, it was supposed, the people would be deprived of a knowledge of the principles of their own faith, and their attention turned to books containing the principles of the Christian Creed. It was supposed that Government would then work on the cupidity, and poverty of its subjects and on condition of their abjuring their faith, offer them employment in its own service.

W. P. as an example of the schemes of Government. It was supposed that when Government had similarly brought all Hindustanees to a pitch of ignorance and poverty, it would convert them to its own creed. The Hindustances used, as I have said, to feel an increasing dismay at the annexation of each successive country by the Hon'ble East India Company. But I assert without fear of contradiction that this feeling arose solely from the belief in their minds, that as the power of Government increased, and there no longer remained foreign enemies to fight against, or internal troubles to quell, it would turn its attention inwards, and carry out a more systematic interference with their creed and religious observances.

In the first days of British rule in Hindustan, there used to be less talk than at present on 'the subject' of re-Religious discusligion. Discussion on this point has been intion being carried to great height during creasing day by day and has now reached its the present time. climax. I do not say that Government has interfered in these matters; but it has been the general opinion that all that was done was according to the instructions and hints of Government, and was by no means displeasing to it. It has been commonly believed that Government appointed Missionaries and maintained them at its own cost. It has been supposed that Government, and the officers of Government throughout the country

5. The bad management, and disaffection of the army.

I shall now proceed to consider these five heads, and all that may be classed under them, distinctly, and in detail.

CAUSE. I.

Ignorance on the part of the people, that is, misapprehension of the intentions Government.

I would here say that I do not wish it to be understood that the views of Government were in reality such Misunderstanding on the pirt of the as have been imputed to them. I only wish to Indians. say that they were misconstrued by the people, and that this misconstruction hurried on the rebellion. Had there been a native of Hindustan in the Legislative Council, the people would never have fallen into such errors.

Apprehension of anterference of Con ernment with the religious cistoms of the Indians.

Interserence in maiters of religion. There is not the smallest doubt that all men whether ignorant, or well-informed, whether high or low; relt a firm conviction that the English Government was bent on interfering with their-religion, and with their old established customs. They believed that Government intended to force the Christian Religion and foreign customs upon Hindu and Mussulman alike. This was the chief among the secondary concess of the rebellion. It was believed by every one that Government was slowly but surely developing its plans. Every step it was thought was being taken with the most extreme cauturn. Hence it is that men said that Government does not speak of 100 Oct on Mahammadans summarily, and by force; but it will the west the well as it feels itself stronger, and will act with greet a stron. Events, as I shall presently shew, increased and strengthened this conviction. Men never thought that our Government would openly compet them to change their religion. The idea was that indirect steps would be taken, such as doing away with the study of Arabic and Sanscrit, and reducing the mind out about them. It was not by such measures as these that evils such as I am writing about could be remedied. Far from it, these half measures were useless.

I do not wish to enter here into the question as to how the ignorant and uneducated natives of Hindustan could be allowed a share in the deliberations of the Legislative Council: or as to how they should be setected to form an assembly like the English Parliament. These are knotty points. All I wish to prove here is that such a step is not only advisable, but absolutely necessary, and that the disturbances are due to the neglect of such a measure. As regards the details of the question, I have elsewhere discussed them; and those who wish to enter into it can read what I have said.

This mistake of the Government then made itself felt in every matter connected with Hindustan. All causes of rebellion proceeded from the following one. And if we look at these various causes separately and distinctly we shall I think, find that they may be classed under five heads.

- 1. Ignorance on the part of the people: by which I mean misapprehension of the intentions of Government.
- 2. The passing of such laws and regulations and forms of procedure as jarred with the established customs and practice of Hindustan, and the int.o luction of such as were in themselves objectionable.
- 3. Ignorance on the part of the Government of the condition of the people; of their modes of thought and of life; and of the grievances through which their hearts were becoming estranged.
- 4. The neglect on the part of our rulers of such points as rere essential to the good Government of Hindustan.

measure, or of giving public expression to their own wishes. But the greatest mischief lay in this that the people misunderstood the views and the intentions of Government. misapprehended every act, and whatever law was passed was misconstrued by men who had no share in the framing of it, and hence no means of judging of its spirit. At length the Hindustanees fell into the habit of thinking that all the laws were passed with a view to degrade and ruin them, and to deprive them and their fellows of their religion. Such acts as were repugnant to native customs and character, whether in themselves good or bad, increased this suspicion. At last came the time when all men looked upon the English Government as slow poison, a rope of sand, a treacherous flame of fire. They learned to think that if to-day they escaped from the hands of Government, to-morrow they would fall into them; or that even if they escaped on the morrow, the third day would see their ruin. There was no man to reason with them, no one to point out to them the absurdity of such ideas. When the Governors and the governed occupy relatively such a position as this, what hope is there of loyalty or of good-will? Granted that the intentions of Government were excellent, there was no man who could convince the people of it; no one was at hand to correct the errors which they had adopted. And why? Because there was not one of their own member among the members of the Legislative Council. Had there been, these evils that have happened to us, would have been averted. The more one thinks the matter over, the more one is convinced that here we have the one great cause which was the origin of all smaller causes of dissatisfaction.

I see no force in the argument that the Government has allowed a perfectly free Press, forbidding it merely to print abusive or seditious language or language of an inflammatory nature. Nor was it of any use to circulate laws before they were finally passed so that every man should have an opportunity of speaking his perity of Bengal when under the rule of Lord Hasting? I attribute it to the knowledge of its peculiarities and the acquaintance with the Vernacular which obtained in those days.

To form a Parliament from the natives of India is of course out of the question. It is not only impossible, but useless. There is no reason however why the natives—this country should be excluded from the Legislative Council, and—it is that you come upon the one great root of all this evil. Here withe origin of all the troubles that have befallen Hindustan. From causes connected with this matter sprang all the evil that has racely happened.

I do not say that Government has made no attempt to acquaint itself with the characteristics, and economy of the country. I am well aware that serious efforts have been made. The Regulations of Government, the Circulars of the Board of Revenue, and Mr. Thomason's Directions to Revenue Officers are sufficient proof of this. But I do say that Government has not succeeded in acquainting itself with the daily habits, the modes of thought and of life, the likes, and dislikes, and the prejudices of the people. Our Government never knew what troubles each succeeding sun might bring with it to its subjects, or what sorrow might fall upon them with the night. Yet day by day troubles and anxieties were increasing upon them. Secret causes of complaint were rankling in their breasts. Little by little a cloud was gathering strength, which finally burst over us in all its violence.

The evils, which resulted to India from the non-admission of

The non-admission of such a member proved a hinderance to the development of the good feeling of the Indian subject towards the Government and of their good intentions towards; on the contratory, contrary effects were produced.

natives into the Legislative Council of India were various. Government could never know the inadvisability of the laws and regulations which it passed. It could never hear as it ought to have heard the voice of the people on such a subject. The people had no means of protesting against what they might feel to be a foolish is from the voice of the people only that Government can learn whether its projects are likely to be well received. The voice of the people can alone check errors in the bud, and warn us of dangers before they burst upon, and destroy us.

A needle may dam the gushing rivulet. An elephant must turn aside from the swollen torrent. This voice however can never be heard and this security never acquired, unless the people are allowed a share in the consultations of Government. The men who have ruled India should never have forgotten that they were here in the position of foreigners, that they differed from its natives in religion, in customs, in habits of life and of thought. The security of a Government, it will be remembered, is founded on its knowledge of the character of the governed, as well on its careful observance of their rights and privileges. Look back at the pages of History, the record of the experience of the past, and you will not fail to be struck with the differences and distinctions that have existed between the manners, the opinions, and the customs of the various races of men: differences which have been acquired by no written rule, or prescribed by any printed form. They are in every instance the inheritance of the peculiar race. It is to these differences of thought and of custom that the laws must be adapted, for they cannot be adapted to the laws. In their due observance lies the welfare and security of Government. From the beginning of things, to disregard these has been to disregard the nature of man, and the neglect of them has ever been the cause of universal discontent. Can we forget the confusion that ensued on the acceptance of the Dewannee by the British Government in the year, 1760, a confusion brought about by the ignorance then prevailing? If one wishes to recall those times, he can read of them in Marshmain's History. Who, on the contrary, does not remember the prowas ignorant and disaffected men who raised the cry of "Jehad! and "Haidree." Presently I shall speak of the causes of discontent among the Muhammadans on the score of religion. I will then shew how far such discontent really did exist. That the bluhammadans were, in every respect more dissatisfied than the Hindus, there is little doubt. Hence it was that, in many districts the greater proportion of rebels were found in their ranks. Never theless, in districts where the Hindus rebelled, matters were carried to as great extremes.

The Bengal army was not previously in league for an outbreak.

A conspiracy, or concerted league never existed in the army. It is well known that after the mutiny had broken out, no Sepoy ever mentioned such & thing. True that after the affair at Barrackpore, and especially in the Punjab, on the introduction of the new drill, men of several regiments used to meet together and declare they would never allow the use of the new cartridges. But they formed no plan whatever; on the contrary, they believed that Government would not insist on carrying out the order, The order was not carried out. But after the 2nd of May, when it had been withdrawn, the mutinies had broken out, and could no longer be checked by such means, a flame had been lit, that was not to be thus quenched.

I am told that when the nutineers arrived at Dehli from lieerut, some persons expressed a ish for a Futwah as to the expediency of a religious war. Every pinion given was against such a step. I have only seen a copy the Futwah I allude to. The original has been lost and it is apossible to say how far the copy may be authentic. But I pay mention that on the arrival of the Bareilly mutineers at Dehli, second Futwah was published with the object of instigating a eligious war, and there is not the smallest doubt that this second tutwah was a forgery. The man who had it printed, and who as a turbulent fellow, and a noted sequndrel, attached certain ames to it in order to deceive the public, and gained for it thus degree of credit. He stamped it, by the way, with the seal of man who had died before the commencement of the mutinees. it may be added that some of the Bareilly mutineers, and their ebel brethern caused several seals to be forged. This fact has pecome a matter of notoriety.

in Hindustan and called upon all men to aid him in carrying it out. But on that occasion he distinctly stated that natives of Hindustan, subject to the British Government could notice conscientiously take part in a religious war within the limits of Hindustan. Accordingly while thousands of Jehadees congregated in every district of Hindustan, there was no sort. of disturbance raised within British Territory.

Going northwards, these men crossed the Paujab frontier, and waged war in those parts of the country. And even it we should imitate the know nothings in the various districts and call the late disturbance a religious war, it is very certain that no preparations were made for it before the tenth of May, 1857.

None of the acts committed by the Muham madan rebels during the disturbances were in accordance with the tenets of the Mahammadan religion.

It must be remembered that the men who in those times raised so loud the cry of "Jehad" were vagabonds and ill-conditioned men. They were wine drinkers and men who spent their time in debauchery and dissipation. They were floating without profession or occupation on the surface of society. Can such fellows as these be called leaders of a religious war? It was very little that they thought about religion. Their only object was to plunder Government Treasuries and to steal Government property. To be faithless to one's salt is to disregard the first principles of our religion. To slaughter innocents, especially women, children and old men would be accounted abominable Can it possibly be imagined then, that this outbreak was of the nature of a religious war? The fact seems to be that some scoundiels prompted by greed and hoping to gain their end by deceiving fools and increasing their ewn numbers, gave the disturbances that the Mussulman owed their very preference and influence in India. How then, can it be supposed that the present revolt originated from hatred on the part of the Mussulman against those who had wrenched the kingdom from them?

would revive the Empire. The excentricities and follies of the King and of his bouse had lost him all respect in the eyes of the world. It is no doubt true that people outside the walls of Delhi, who were less well informed as to his

when the King was virtually deposed, no Hindustance felt the slightest regret. It will be remembered that in the year 1827 Lord Amherst openly declared that our Government was no longer in any way subservient to the house of Timour, and that the East India Company was defacto the sole Sovereign power in Hindustan, and that when this declaration was made, the natives expressed no dissatisfaction. The only men propably who felt any chagrin were the relatives and personal attendants of the King.

They date its commencement from the year 1757: the year in which Suraj-ul-dowlab was overthrown on the plains of Plassy, from that day until a comparatively recent date, all men, high or low, have remained well-affected to the English Government. They have long been accustomed to hear of the good faith, the clemency, the consideration, and the leniency of the Government, of the noble qualities and the high moral character of those by whom it has been conducted. Hindu and Mussulman, all who have been under English rule have been well content to sit under its shadow. Foreign princes have relied implicitly upon the English. A promise given, or an agreement made by them has been looked upon as graven on stone. The Government is twice as strong in these times as it was in the earlier years of the century; while the native princes, the Subabdars and the nobles do not retain one tenth of the power they then had. The Government was continually engaged at that period in wars with every race and religion in India, with Hindu and with Mussulman alike. Its career was one long victory. All natives of the country saw that some day the English sway would extend itself over the whole of Hindustan, and that all races and religions alike must sooner or later be held within the Euglish grasp. And yet during those early years we hear of no attempt at revolt, no striving against English authority. Find if you can any mention of such in the History of India. Had a national hatred been the cause of this rebellion, should we not have found it betraving itself in former times; in times, as I have said, when the relative power of the nations gave far greater facilities for such an outbreak? During the wars which commenced in 1839, there was not a single attempt at a revolt in Hindustan, and yet for a hundred years Hindustan had been governed by the race from which sprang the Princes against whom those wars were conducted. It was to those Princes of such a dotard writing a farmán to any person, or at any man's instigation? Surely not: But it is perfectly incredible that such a farmán should have formed the basis of any league. Strange that such wide conspiracies should have been for so long hatching, and that none of our rulers should have been aware of them! After the revolt had broken out, no volunteer, whether Soldier or Civilian, ever alluded to such a thing; and yet had any league existed, there could then have no longer been any reason for concealing it.

Nor do I believe that the annexation of Oudh was the cause of this rebellion. No doubt, men of all classes The annexation of were irritated at its annexation, all agreed in Oudh not the cause of the general rise. thinking that the Honourable East India Company had acted in defiance of its treaties, and in contempt of the word which it had pledged. The people of Oudh felt on this occasion much as other men have felt whose countries have been aunexed by the East India Company. Of this, however, more hereafter. But what I mean here is that the men who would be the most irritated and dismayed at such a step, were the noblemen, and independent princes of Hindustan. These all saw that sooner or later such a policy must lead to the overthrow of their own independence and confiscation of their own lands. Nevertheless we find that there was not one of the great- landed princes who espoused the rebel cause. The mutineers were for the most part men who had nothing to lose, the governed not the governing class. To cite in contradiction of what I say the cases of the Nawab of Jhujjar, and the Rajah of Bulubgurh, and other such petty fendatories would shew little else than ignorance of the status of the various Hindustanee chiefs.

So too we must reject the idea that the natives of this country rose of one accord to throw off the yoke of format framed with the reigners, whom they hated and detested. The with her. Nor can I think that they would ever be likely to receive any help from Persia. As between Roman Catholics and Protestants, so between the Mussulman of Persia and of Hindustan, cordial co-operation is impossible. To me it seems just as credible that night and day should be merged in one, as that these men should ever act in concert. Surely, if such were the case, it is very strange that during the Russian and Persian wars, Hindustan should have remained completely tranquil. Nor on the other hand is it less strange that while Hindustan was in flames, there should have been in those countries no visible stir whatever. The notion of an understanding existing between these countries must be set aside as preposterous.

The proclamation found in the tent of a Persian Prince is no proof of a secret understanding with Hindustan. It was evidently written with the view of animating and encouraging the Persians. Mutinies are spoken of in order to keep up the spirit of the Persian Soldiers. There is nothing whatever to imply the existence of an understanding with the Mutineers.

The despatch of a Firman, by the Exking of Delhi to the Ling of Persia not improbable, but not the origin of the rebellion.

I see nothing strange in the fact, if fact it were, of the Exking of Delhi having written a farman to the Persians. Such an imbecile was the Ex-king that had one assured him that the angels of Heaven were his slaves, he would have welcomed the assurance, and would have caused half a dozen farmans to be prepared immediately. The Ex-king had a fixed idea that he could transform himself into a fly or gnat, and that he could in this guise convey himself to other countries, and learn what was going on there. Seriously, he firmly believed that he possessed the power of transformation. He was in the habit of asking his courtiers in Durbar if it's ere not so, and his courtiers were not the men to undecerve him. Is there anything wonderful in the fact.

As regards the Rebellion of 1857, the fact is, that for a long period, many grievances had been rankling in the hearts of the people. In course of time, a vast store of explosive material had been collected. It wanted but the application of a match.

to light it, and that match was applied by the Mutinous Army.

In the course of the year 1856, and almost simultaneously hand to hand in many districts. Cholera happened at that time to be raging in Hindustan.

Some have imagined that these chuppaties were used as a kind of Talisman to keep off the Cholera, the superstitious Hindustanees being in the habit of using such talismans. The fact is that even at the present day we do not know what caused the distribution of those chupcaties. We may be very sure, however, that they could never have been used with the object of spreading a conspiracy. We have, in Hindustan, I know, a custom of passing messages from tongue to tongue in this way: but with these chuppaties there was no such message passed. Had there been, it would have been sure to have leaked out; known as it would have become to every native, to all races and tribes, and to men holding every kind of opinion. The manner in which the rebellion spread, first here, then there, now breaking out in this place and now in that, is alone good proof that there existed no wide-spread conspiracy.

Nor is there the slightest reason for thinking that the rebels in Hindustan received any aid from Russia or from Persia. The Hindustanees have no conception of the views of Russia, and it is not ter.

nought, and disobey the orders of Government with a view to resist its authority, or with contempt, and disrespect to infringe the rights of Government, and disregard its prerogations in any, or in all of these, I take it that Rebellion consists.

Let us clearly recapitulate the above.

- 1. To fight with, or oppose, the servants, or subjects of Government.
- 2. To neglect, and set at nought the Orders of Government, with a view to resist its authority.
- 3. To aid and assist or in any way take part with those who are in open opposition to Government.
- 4 To shew a turbulent disposition, and such as is likely to lead to lawless riot, and disregard of the Authority of Government.
- 5. To swerve at heart from respect and loyalty to the Government; and in times of trouble, to withhold from it an active support.

In that sad year, 1857, there was not one of these forms of rebellion which did not find a place. There are but few men in truth, even amongst the best of us, who may not be connected under the latter head; which, though in appearance of little import, is in reality of no small weight.

The primary causes of rebellion are, I fancy, everywhere the same. It invariably results from the existence of a policy obnoxious to the dispositions, aims, habits, and views, of those by whom the rebellion is brought about.

From this it follows that widely-spread disaffection cannot spring from any solitary, or local cause. Universal rebellion must ause from universal grounds for discontent or from streams, do-

IN THE NAME OF GOD, THE MERCIFUL, THE COMPASSIONATE.

"Obedience and submission become the servant;

Forgiveness is the attribute of God:

If I should do amiss

Leward me as seemeth right in Thine eyes."

Since I began this Essay on the causes of the Rebellion in Hindustan I have been tempted to keep silence on the events of the past, and even to wish my remembrance of them should be blotted out. The proclamation issued by Her Majesty contains such ample redress for every grievance which led up to that revolt, that a man writing on the subject feels his pen fall from his hands. Why enter further into the matter when the cause of all the dissatisfaction has been discovered and provided against? Yet I think that loyal men, and such as really wish well to their Government, should not content themselves with reflection: but explain with all possible fidelity, their views on the origin of this rebellion. Although, therefore, the causes of complaint have been met, and the grievances recressed, I think it my duty to record my opinion on the subject. That many well-informed, able, and experienced men bave written on the causes of the disturbance, I know; but I am not aware that any native of the country has hitherto been among their number. I venture therefore, publicly to express my opinion.

What were the causes of the Rebellion in Hindustan?

Before answering this question, let us ask what is the meaning of the word, Rebellion. To fight against the bellion" exemplified Government, to aid and assist those who are rewith instances.

PREFACE.

The following pages though written in 1858 have not yet been published. I publish them now as, although many years have elapsed since they were indited, nothing has occurred to cause me to change my opinions. An honest exposition of Native ideas is all that our Government requires to enable it to hold the country with the full concurrence of its inhabitants and not merely by the sword.

An Essay on the Causes of the Indian Revolt of Saigid Shomad Schan Rincipal Sadr Amin of Muradahili

In the name of the most mureful and compassionate bod.

Sepandence and humility become the creature of progress is creature is the part of God -

Mith regard to the original causes of the rebellion in Andustian, which Shave sed forth in my lesing on that subject, although my keart in deseroud to erase them now promise the page of exertince, may to obliterate. Kem from mine own mend; meme as the troclamation which has been promulgated by the majesty Liente Tielonia Buy Ker lingine kegantoretel is in fact the complete samely of each pumary cause of the rebellion and, indeed, the livition of the circuit of the rebellion on beholding the funfamilia different religion, or of raising a tumult amongst the ignorant and disaffected with the cry of a holy war! holy war and after uttering this religious shout that they should draw back is altogether unworthy of belief. With regard indeed to the extent to which the Moslems were discontented we shall explain that clearly hereafter. Of this there is no doubt that in comparison with the Hindoos the Moslems were more discontented on this subject and every other; and this is the reason that in several Provinces the Moslems have been more rebellious than the Hindoos, though the Provinces in which the Hindoos have rebelled, have not been few.

antecedent conspiracy or plan in the army to rebel. It is quite certain that after the army had broken out in revolt, they never spoke of such a conspiracy amongst themselves; we must grant however that after what took place at Bararrackpore and especially at the time when men were assembled from different regiments to learn the new drill in the Panjab, they agreed among themselves never to use the new cartridges, but even at that time there was no ulterior purpose or design of any kind. Moreover they felt assured that the government would put a stop to this matter, although it was stopped nevertheless from stopping it after the 10 of May 1857, no advantage resulted towards suppressing the revolt and the conflagration was not of a kind which could be extinguished by such counsels.

their having been such a war, but I have heard one good authority and many proofs may be adduced of it that it is altogether a counterfeit. I have heard that when the mutinous army marched from Meerut to Delhi some person asked for a decree for a holy war, but a unanimous decree was given that no such war could take place. Although I have seen a copy of this first decree yet as the original decree is lost I am unable to say how far the copy can be depended upon; but when the Bareilly troops reached Delhi, and a decree was given a second time the nature which is well known and wherein it was written that it is lawful to commence a holy war that was undoubtedly not a genuine decree, the man who printed it was a rebel, and one long known to be of bad character, and he attached to it the names of people in order to deceive and mislead the ignorant; and having printed these names he thus gave an air of importance to it. Moreover he printed on it the halfseal of a person who had died before the rebellion, moreover it is well known that many persons were compelled forcibly and violently by the mutinous troops from Bareilly and the traitors along with them to affix their seals.

There was a very large number of maulavis in Delhi and of their followers who in religious point of view regarded the deposed King of Delhi as a very wicked and heretical person. Their belief was that prayers could not rightly be offered in those mosques at Delhi where the king had possession and the power of interference or management; these persons accordingly would not pray in the Cathedral mosques, and decrees on this subject printed long anterior to the rebellion are in existence. Can any reasonable man then assent to this that the very persons whose seals were upon decrees of this nature would have decreed that a Jihad could rightly have been commenced and that the King was to have been made leader. Of those persons whose seals are stamped upon the decree several protected Christians, and detended their lives and honor, not one of them tought against the English nor resisted them-how would they have acted thus had the tacts been as they are public supposed. In short my opinion is that the Moslems never entertain the idea of uniting to wage a holy war against rulers of a people of other religions and of freeing themselves from their rule. In as much as the Moslems were living securely under our government it was quite impossible for them to raise a Jihad within the territories of the government (35 years before a very celebrated mauiavi Muhammad Ismail had preached a Jihad in Hindustan and invited all men to engage in that holy war, but he, at that time clearly announced that the inhabitants of Hindustan who were remaining at peace under the English government ought not to engage in the Jihad in India wherefore thousands of combatants in the holy war assembled in every province in India and caused no disturbances whatever in the dominions of the English Government, but went to the West of the Punjab and there fough; and this which is called a Jihad the leaders of which in each province are low and ignorant people; even then the agreement and compact which lead to it did not take place before the 10th of May 1857.

We must bear in mind that at this period the people who set up the flag of the holy war were so bad and disrespectable and depraved that they had no other business but were drinking and libertinism and the nach and entertainment. Now how could such people be considered the leaders and guides in a holy war. Moreover at this time there was not a single thing done in accordance with religious duties. All are aware that for the servants of Government to dishonestly appropriate the treasure and property of the government committed to their charge and thus to break their faith was not right in a religious point of view. It is also quite manifest that according to the rules of the religion it is prodigious crime to put innocent persons to death, especially women and children and old people; then how could these disturbances have the excuse of a holy war. Without doubt indeed some villains pretended to call it a holy war, in order that they might gratify their own avarices and advantage themselves and obtain their own desires and that they might deceive the ignorant and encourage their own party. This is merely one of the rescalities of the wicked rebels and does not make the war, in fact a holy one.

The fatwa or declaration of a holy war which was printed at Delhi has been thought to be a strong proof of all India and that all the people of India whether Hindoos or Moslem would one day be governed by it. Notwithstanding all this there never was any rebellion or resistance to our government and no mention of any such rebellion occurs in any of the histories. If therefore the rebellion had proceeded from the cause we have mentioned above then there must needs have been some example in those times of similar revolts and this the rather as in those times there was greater opportunity for such a rebellion, for example-during the war of 1839 when nevertheless there was no sort of rebellion in Hindustan. Although for centuries India had been under the sway of the kings of those very countries with whom the government was then at war and although the appearance of the Moslems in India and their rise to power was owing to the kings of those very countries. It is therefore not supposable that the Moslems would have raised this rebellion through pain at seeing their sovereignty taken from them.

Not a single person was desirous of seeing the government of the deposed King of Delhi restored. The folly and profligacy of this family had subverted its character and dignity in the eyes of all - it is true that the people of distant districts who are unacquainted with the condition and ill conduct and estimation and authority of the king still thought a great deal of him and regarded him as the King in Hindustan and the Honorable East India Company as the superintendent of Hindustan under him but the inhabitant of Delhi itself and of the adjacent country had no respect whatever for the King, and besides all this no sensation had been caused to any of the people of India by the Kings deposition. It will be remembered that when in the year 1827, lord Amhurst publicly announced that his government was entirely independent of the House of Timur and moreover was itself the king of Hindustan, then the people and the rulers of India gave no heed whatever to the circumstances it was only to the Royal family themselves that this was a circumstance of pain.

It is very unfounded idea that the Moslems had for a long time conspired and confederated together for the purpose of carrying on a Jihad or holy war against the when the Company conquered any country, mention of which will be made hereafter. To the princes of Delhi and to the Chiefs themselves who ruled in Hindustan the fear and alarm and dissatisfaction were still greater; all were fully persuaded that the dominions and powers and governments of all would be similarly seized upon; nevertheless we see that there was not a single rebel amongst the ruling chiefs, those who joined in this rebellion were mostly people whose countries had been taken from them; the cases of the Nawab of Jhajhar and of the Rajah of Balabgarh and of others are not to be cited against this opinion.

Nor is it to be imagined with reference to this rebellion that all people of Hindustan united in rebellion through feeling of grief and regret that a foreign nation and stranger tribe has got possession of the ancient empire of the Hindustani people. It is to be remembered that the rule of our government did not shoot up suddenly in Hindustan but was gradually developed. It's beginning is reckoned from the year 1757, from the time of the defeat of Sirajud-daulah at Plassey. Shortly after that period the hearts of all the people and subjects were attracted towards our government, and bearing continually the good qualities and excellencies, the mercifulness and liberality and steadfastness as regards agreements and carefulness? Of the general welfare shown by the government officers and the peacefulness and repose which prevailed under them. The officers both Hindoo and Muslaman who resided contiguously to our government entertained the wish that they might dwell under the shadow of the rule of our government. The kings of foreign countries were reposing entire confidence in our government and considered the treaties and agreements which they had formed with our government to be sure to be maintained inviolate and as durable as though written on stone. Although our Govt. has become vastly powerful as compared with what it was at first and on the contrary not a tenth of the power is left to the native princes and governors and rulers which they first had, and although in, those days our government waged many wars with every tribe of Hindustan, both Hindoos and Musalman and was invariably victorious so that all the natives of Hindustan were persuaded that our government would one day overspread Hindustan nothing took place in these countries, and yet they should be thought to be confederates with India.

Not a word of the proclamation which, as is well known, was found in the tent of a Persian prince, alludes to a conspiracy with Hindustan; its contents refer only to encouragements of the people of his own country. The mention of the evil state of affairs in Hindustan is only introduced to show that the Persian ought to be more prepared to fight and there is no hint at any confederacy with India having been concluded.

There is nothing strange in the circumstances of the deposed King of Delhi writing a Farman to Persia. The condition of the deposed King of Delhi was such that if it has been said to him that the King of the genie in fairy-land is your Majesty's servant, he would have believed it true; and not to say one Farman, would have written ten. The deposed King of Delhi was always fancying that he was being transformed into a fly or mosquito and going and getting information about different nations and countries and he believed in his own mind that this thing was really the case, and used to ask his courtiers to attest it and they all did attest it. It is not to be wondered at then, if such a lunatic wrote any Farman at anybody's suggestion, but it is not be supposed that any such Farman formed the basis of a conspiracy in any manner whatever. Does it not seem surprising that there should be so great a conspiracy and that it should have endured so long and our authorities have been altogether unacquainted with it, and that after the revolt no rebel either soldier or civilian should have made mention of any kind of conspiracy although after the revolt they would not have been withheld by tear from mentioning ıt

We are not to suppose that the annexation of Awadh either was cause of this rebellion; there is indeed no doubt that all people were displeased with the annexation of Awadh and all were convinced that the Honorable East India Company had acted in violation of treaties and promises. In general the dissatisfaction of the people with the annexation of Awadh was of the same description as it always was

In the rebellion of 1857 this very thing was the case that many causes had for a long time been collected in the minds of the people, and a very great magazine has been formed and all that remained was that it should be hastily kindled, which was done last year by the rebellion of the troops.

With regard to the distribution of chapatis, and the breaking out of the rebellion shortly afterwards, although at that time, cholera was epidemic throughout all Hindustan, and it may be thought that this contrivance was adopted as an antidote to the cholera, as a charm against it, in as much as ignorant natives of Hindustan very often practise this kind of charm, yet the truth is, the original cause of the distribution has not yet been divulged, but there is no doubt that the chapatis could not have been the foundation of a conspiracy.

It is certainly customary for a thing of this nature to be a taken to test the truth of a message, and it is notorious that no verbal message was sent with the chapatis; had a message been sent, it is impossible that it could have remained concealed inspite of its being so widely promulgated and to spread amongst people of every tribe and every disposition. The manners in which the rebellion spread throughout Hindustan, and hurried from this place to that and from that place to this is a clear proof that there was no conspiracy in the first instance.

originated from a conspiracy in which Russia and Persia were implicated is a most unfounded idea. How could the people of Hindustan conspire with those in Russia when the views of the Russians are altogether unknown to them. The Persians could never conspire with the Hindoos, for the Muhammadans of Hindustan and the Persians to agree, is as impossible as for the Protestants and Roman Catholics. It it be possible for the day and night to be united at one time then truly it is possible for this confederacy to take place. The strange thing is that when war was being carried between England and the Russians and Persians nothing took place in Hindustan, and when disaffection arose in

SUBJECT

What was the cause of the rebellion in Hindustan?

Answer: In answering this question it is first incumbent upon us to define rightly what is the meaning of rebellion: - viz whether it be the opposing our Government, or taking part with those who oppose it, or to disregard and disobey orders with a rebellious spirit, or unconsciously to violate the rights and limits of the government:-for example:

1st-As servant or subject fighting and opposing his Government.

2nd-Or disregarding and disobeying orders in a rebellious spirit.

3rd-Or his aiding and abetting rebels.

4th-Or subjects audaciously fighting amongst themselves and violating the fixed limits of Government.

5th-Or the not entertaining in their hearts affection and loyalty towards their Government, and not aiding with it in times of calamity.

In the critical year 1857 which has just past, there is not one of all these kinds of rebellion which has not existed, nay there will be found but very few men, being persons of remarkable wisdom, who are clear of the last kind of disaffection. Moreover as this last kind is but little openly manifested, it is substantially abundantly common.

The one sole cause of rebellious intent arising in the heart is the occurrences of things which are opposed to the dispositions and temperaments, and purposes and resolves and customs and habits and characters and natures of those who become rebels.

From this statement it is proved that no special thing can be the cause of a general rebellion. Aye of a general rebellion, either something as general may be the cause which is opposed to the feelings of all, or various matters may be the cause of which some one thing is repugnant to the feelings of another party, and thus by degrees a general disaffection is brought about

AN ESSAY ON THE CAUSES OF THE INDIAN REVOLT, BY SAIYID AHMAD KHAN, PRINCIPAL SADR AMIN OF MURADABAD

In the name of the most merciful and compassionate God!

Dependence and humility became the creature

To forgive his creature is the part of God

If I do that which becomes me not

Do than to all that is suitable to thee

With regard to the original causes of the rebellion in Hindustan, which I have set forth in my essay on that subject, although my heart was desirous to erase them now from the page of existence, nay to obliterate them from mine own mind, in as much as the proclamation which has been promulgated by Her Majesty Queen Victoria (may Her Empire be perpetuated) is in fact the complete remedy of each primary cause of the rebellion, and indeed, the writers of the causes of the rebellion on beholding the purport of that Proclamation, let the pens drop from their hands, and all feel it be unnecessary to make a diagnosis of these causes now, because their complete remedy has been exhibited, nevertheless to reflect upon the primary causes of the disturbances, and to advance true grounds for the veracity of my own statements, is in my opinion a strong proof of my attachment to the Government. Therefore, although the things which have occasioned the rebellion have been well remedied, it is still incumbent upon me to publish those which I know. It is true that persons of great wisdom and experience have written on the causes of this rebellion, but on the supposition that no native of Hindustan has written on the subject, there is room for hoping that it will be well for the opinion of one such person too, to be left on record.

This letter was written in reply to Kaye's letter of 30 November 1869 in which Kaye had expressed his opinion that "the 1857 rebellion was much more than a mere military mutiny and had asked Sir Syed's opinion "as to the extent that it grew into a popular rebellion." Sir Syed's reply reveals some important changes in his views from those expressed in his Causes of the Indian Revolt. Whereas in his work he had clearly stated that there was no definition of the word mutiny which did not apply to the rebellion of 1857, here in this letter he argues against calling it a military mutiny. Similarly his views about the spread of the mutiny in the N.W. Provinces seems contrary to what he had expressed in the above-mentioned work, whose very title Causes of the Indian Revolt implies that it was much more than "localized disturbances organized by robber and dacoits, some of the minor chiefs."

The publication of these three documents will, I am sure add significantly to our understanding of Sir Syed's views on the causes of the 1857 Rebellion.

finally, I must express my gratitude to my life Margarita Maura & my son Yousaf for typing the manuscript.

London. 12 March 1994. Christians and because of this Muslims were in the forefront of the rebellion. Sir Syed took up this responsibility on himself to convince the British that all these accusations were baseless and were the result of miscomprehension and that the sacrifices made by the Muslims for the Government were in many ways much more than by any other community (Hayat-i-Javed, Agra, 1903 pp. 73-76. Translated from Urdu.)

Unlike the commonly available version of the Asbabi-Baghavat-i-Hind the present copy, in addition to the Urdu text, includes a preface, detailed list of contents, summaries of paragraphs, as well as text of "Mr. Edmonds letter addressed to the educated natives of India" in English.

This work was rendered into English by Sir Syed's two English friends G.F Graham and Sir Auckland Colvin and published from Benares in 1873. Because of its importance and to make Sir Syed's all known writings on the causes of the revolt accessible to researcher in one place this work is also included in this volume.

The next item in this volume is an autograph letter of Sir Syed, addressed to Sir John Kaye. It is dated 14 December 1869 and was sent from 21 Mecklenburgh Square, London, where Sir Syed was staying along with his two sons, Syed Hamid and Syed Mahmud between May 1869 and October 1870. During his stay in London Sir Syed was a frequent visitor to the India Office where he met Sir John Kaye who was at that time Secretary in the Political and Secret Department and was engaged in writing an official history of the Indian Mutiny. In addition to consulting Sir Syed's Causes of the Indian Revolt Sir John Kaye had sought Sir Syed's advice on various other matters and in this History of the Sepoy War in India (London, 1872-1876) quotes the text of a letter he had received from Sir Syed explaining the custom of succession in the Royal family of Delhi. (Vol. 2 pp. 24, 685)

any copies of the work available in India. After some time, when he was fully convinced that there was no copy available in India he became a friend and a sympathiser of Sir Syed [Translated from urdu]

Later on the work was translated into English and published by Sir Syed's two English friends, G.F.I. Graham and Sir Auckland Colvin in 1873. In its Preface Sir Syed explains his purpose in publishing this translation as; An honest exposition of native ideas is all that our Government requires to enable it to hold the country with the full concurrence of its inhabitants and not merely by the sowrd."

With regards to the contents and value of this work Graham in his Life and works of Syed Ahmed Khan (London, 1885) comments; Although some of us may not agree with Syed Ahmed's Causes of the Indian Revolt, the Pamphlet is exceedingly valuable, as giving us an insight into the native modes of thought, and as written by the ablest of our loyal Mohammedan gentlemen (pp. 32-33)

Sir Syed's main purpose in writing this essay and in submitting nearly five hundred copies to the British Parliament was not only to put forward what he believed were the true cause of the discontentment of the natives but also to convince the Government that the revolt was no more than "localized disturbances organized by robbers and dacoits, some of the minor chiefs of Cawnpore, Bignor, Bareilly and Farrukhabad and some of the Muslims remained loyal to the British Government.

Hali, a great friend and associate of Sir Syed further on explains the reasons for writing this essay;

'As all the articles, essays and books published by the British on this subject were against Muslims it made Sir Syed very anxious and concerned. Muslims were accused by some that they hated the English because of their religion, while other believed that because of Shah Niamatullah Walis predictions all Muslims were convinced that the British rule was coming to an end. Most of all they all accused Muslim that their religion permitted Jihad or Holy war against

When Rae Shankar Das saw that Sir Syed was very determined he, with tears in his eyes, kept quiet. Sir Syed first offered his prayers and then posted a parcel containing a few less than five hundred copies to England. He also sent one copy to the Government of India and kept a few copies for himself. When it was received by the Government of India and a translation was presented to the Council, Lord Canning, the Governor General and Sir Bartle Frere, who was a member of the Council considered it the work of a sympathiser. However, Cecil-Beadon, who was foreign Secretary at that time made a long speech against it and accused Sir Syed of writing a seditious essay. He recommended that Sir Syed should be reprimanded for writing it and if he was unable to provide a satisfactory explanation he should be severely punished."

"A few days later Lord Canning held a Durbar in Farrukhabad and Sir Syed was also invited to attend. Here Cecil-Beadon, Foreign Secretary to the he came across Government of India. When Cecil-Beadon learned that Sir Syed was the author of the Essay on the Causes of the Indian Revolt he asked him to come and see him the next day. During their meeting Cecil-Beadon expressed his concern over the publication of such a work and had some harsh words with Sir Syed on this subject, telling him that if he had written such an essay with the welfare of the Government in mind he would not have had it published and distributed in the country but would have expressed his views privately to the Government alone. Sir Syed replied that he had only five hundred copies printed. Except for a few copies kept by him and one copy sent to the Government of India, the rest were sent to England. He had kept a receipt to prove it. He knew that because of their anger and hate the judgement of the British officials was impaired and they considered even a right thing as wrong. That is why he had neither distributed any copies in India nor shown one to any Englishman. He had sent only one copy to the Government. He challenged anyone to produce even a single copy of this work in India and he would pay him one thousand rupees for each copy produced. Mr. Cecil-Beadon, however was not convinced and he subsequently kept on enquiring from Sir Syed if there was Sir Syed is, however, the only Muslim to put forward an Indian and specifically Muslim point of view on this subject. All other submissions are by Hindu/authors and were written mainly to exonerate the Hindu community and to convince the Government of their loyalty. For example when a British official asked the opinion of an educated Hindu on the causes of Indian revolt his reply was "the gross wrongs inflicted on Nana Sahib; the injustice done to Kunwar Singh; the injuries inflicted on the Rani of Jhansi; the seizure of the Kingdom of Oudh; the fraudulent embezzlement perpetrated with to the Rao of Kirwi, and scores of lesser wrongs done in the reckless regard to the landowners under the administration of the North-west provinces" insolence [Kaye and Mallesson History of the Indian Mutiny, London 1889 p. 282].

The second work included in this volume is the original and hither to unpublished version of Sir Syed's "Essay on the causes of the Indian Revolt". it was originally printed for Sir Syed in 1859. However, because of the Government proscription on such publications all copies, except the one now surviving in the official files of the India Office Records, seems to have been destroyed. Altaf Hussain Hali, in his biography of Sir Syed, Hayat-i-Javed (Agra, 1903, pp. 73-76) gives us a detailed account of this work.

"Sir Syed had perhaps started writing this essay soon after he arrived in Moradabad. As soon as it was complete, without waiting for it to be translated into English, he sent the Urdu text to Mofussilite Gazette Press in Agra for printing. He received five hundred copies from the press in 1859. When his friends came to know about his decision to send copies of this work to the Parliament and to the Government of India they strongly advised him against this. Master Shankar Das, younger brother of Master Ram Chandar who was a judge in Moradabad and a close friend of Sir Syed advised him not to risk his life and to burn all the copies at once. Sir Syed's response was that he had written the essay keeping the best interest of the Government and those of the country and the people in mind and that the regarded it his duty to bring this to the notice of the an ament even if it resulted in some harm to himself.

PREFACE

This Volume brings together, for the first time Sir Syed's three previously unpublished Essays on the Causes of the Indian Revolt. The first is a hand-written essay which Sir Syed sent to the Secretary of State for India just after Queen Victoria's famous proclamation of 1 November, 1858.

Sir Syed explains that his purpose in writing this essay is "to reflect upon the primary causes of these disturbances and to advance true grounds for the veracity of my own statement. "At the same time he expresses his satisfaction at the "Complete remedy of each primary cause of the rebellion" achieved by the government.

Sir Syed claims that he is sending this essay to the Secretary of State India "on the supposition that no native of Hindustan has written on the subject" and that there is "room for hoping that it will be well for the opinion of one such person too, to be kept on record."

However, Sir Syed seems to have been unaware of the fact that the Government had meanwhile asked a number of other native officials and munshis to write their opinions on the subject. Amongst those whose views are now preserved in the official records of the Government, include Munshi Jeewan Lal, Munshi Kedar Nath and Munshi Mohan Lal. The most detailed statements amongst these are, The thoughts of a native of northern India on the Rebellion, its causes and remedies, printed in London in 1858 and Munshi Mohan Lal's Causes, rise, and progress of the Mutiny and Rebellion submitted to Brigadier Chamberlain on 11th November 1857
